McAdoo Marching East
Money, Queer Thing
India's Real Peril
Young Lady for Sale

—By Arthur Brisbane

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 1—William Gibbs McAdoo is on his way East from here. California politicians say a presidential bee is his escort.

This region, that usually and wisely abstains from political excitement far in advance of election day, pays unusual attention to politics this year.

Various straw votes indicate great strength for Governor Roosevelt. Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith comes second.

Money is a queer thing, nobody understands it. For instance, the British are forced to abandon gold after trying to force it upon India, which has been a silver country for 5000 years.

The pound sterling drops lower and lower and British prosperity rises. Unemployed are fewer, cotton mills that have been closed are running on full time. Lancashire is cheerful in spite of Gandhi's boycott.

China boycotting Japan sends to Britain business held by Japan hitherto. Our dollar is so valuable and expensive that Asia can't afford to use it and therefore can't buy from us.

Gandhi is going back to India's coral strands, saying that "There will be hell" and he expects "another period of terror." He is not old enough to remember India's real permanent period of terror that existed for many centuries before Britain took charge.

If he could have his way and gain independence for India, he would see that old terror come back, thousands of young widows burned alive every year with the corpses of their old husbands, little girls, seven and eight years old, married to middle-aged men, and dying in premature childbirth.

A "beautiful little lady," 21 years old, height 5 feet, 6 inches, weight 130 pounds, hair blond (natural), eyes brown, wishes $10,000 for her parents and will marry "any respectable white man, deaf, dumb, crippled or blind, if he will provide the $10-000 and can support her.

A visitor from Mars would learn with interest that such a bargain could be carried out "quite respectably" and such a sale would be very different from transactions ordinarily carried on in "the oldest profession."

The big moving picture men are here in Los Angeles with the moving picture industry stretched out in the middle of them, giving a good imitation of Rembrandt's "Lesson in Anatomy." Adolph Zukor is here, both the Schencks, Joseph and Nicholas; Harry Warner of Warner Brothers, Louis B. Mayer, Carl Laemmle, Winfield Sheehan and Will H. Hays, moving picture czar, who wonders what has made his empire shrink so suddenly.

There may be some of the mergers, to which the automobile industry is accustomed.

Some here complain that high finance has too much to say about pictures. High finance devoutly wishes that it had had less to say.

Today begins the last month of the year of our Lord and of WORRY, 1931. It is nearly over and you may find comfort in that. But Christmas will soon arrive and give you an opportunity to show that you refuse to be discouraged.

You will find it worth while to give to those that least expect it. And if you want to please an older person, give something USELESS, something not practically useful.

It may surprise you to learn that a lady of 70 would prefer a necklace, bracelet or a ring to a warm, knitted shawl.

Congress is preparing a running start of law making and suggesting. Prepare for new ideas, wise and otherwise. Wall Street and its stock exchange will be particularly interested in things suggested by senators and representatives. Stock speculation, banking, and especially selling short what the seller hasn't got, will receive attention, some of it not welcome.

Wall Street decided to cheer up a little yesterday. Money hoarding has diminished. You get tired of seeing your money earn nothing. It is like fixing hens so they cannot lay. Arizona reports a new kind of gold strike in the northeastern section of the state. "Free gold" has been found in granite formation, deposits like those in Colorado.

But don't buy any new gold stock until you know something about it.

The world's high finance evidently does not think much of Germany's financial responsibility. Seven per cent bonds of the German republic dropped to 46 yesterday, German international five and a half per cent bonds sold at 30¼.

Revere's Closed Bank to Pay Off for Xmas

In line with the Boston Evening American's suggestion that depositors of banks closed by the state should receive part of their money for Christmas, Bank Commissioner Arthur Guy announced such a plan in connection with the Revere Trust Co.

Following a conference at the State House with Representative Thomas F. Carroll of Revere, Commissioner Guy issued a statement that this week depositors will have an opportunity to prove their claims against the bank as the first step in a pre-Christmas payment.

"An estimate of recovery at this time is 70 per cent in the savings department," he said, "and 30 per cent in the commercial department. This does not include what may be salvaged from such assets not classified as losses, or from stockholders' and directors' liability.

WORK OUT LOAN PLAN

"It is felt that arrangements can be made to have interested banks loan on the proofs of claims of the depositors so that some funds may be available for taxes and Christmas.

"Attempts to reorganize the bank have failed, due to economic conditions, but it should be understood that everything that can be done will be done for the benefit of the depositors of the Revere Trust Co."

THE AMERICAN PLAN

The Boston Evening American, in an editorial on Nov. 28, urged that some plan be worked out so that unfortunate men and women whose savings are tied up in closed banks, might get part of their money for Christmas.

The editorial suggested that Governor Ely and the Executive Council, with the state board of bank incorporation, might work out some method of relieving depositors in the closed institutions.

Malden Wife in Strange Love Triangle

2 HUNTED IN FAITHFULL MURDER

Boston Men Believed to Have Slain the Beauty Because She Wouldn't Extort

By HARRY A. BENWELL
Copyright, 1931, by the Boston Evening American.

The investigation of the mysterious death of Starr Faithfull, former Beacon Hill beauty, has been reopened in Boston, the Boston Evening American learned today.

Sensational new evidence has been uncovered involving two Boston men in the tragic death of the 25-year-old "party girl," whose bloated body was washed ashore on Long Island, N. Y., last June, it was learned. Private detectives were engaged by New York authorities six days ago to run down the new clues in Boston.

SEEN WITH GIRL

The two Boston men, the Evening American has discovered, were seen in New York, and later in a cafe in Long Beach, Long Island, with Starr Faithfull on the fateful Friday when she dropped out of sight, never to appear again in life.

Following a violent argument they are believed to have knocked the girl unconscious, and then, thinking her to be dead, to have hurled her body into the sea.

This new evidence called to Boston last week Asst. Dist.-Atty. Martin Littleton, Jr., and Detective Jesse Mayforth of Nassau County, Long Island, it was disclosed.

With Inspector Harold King of Nassau County they have been assigned to the new probe by Dist. Atty. Elvin Edwards, who has just been re-elected to office, and came here to run down clues.

The visit of Littleton and Mayforth, the Boston Evening American also discovered, followed by only a few days a secret visit to Boston of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley E.

GRID SPREE HIT BY WELLESLEY

"An exciting excuse for drinking and cheering."

"America has done to athletics in men's colleges, and to football in particular, what she has done at one time or another to every important aspect of American life," an editorial said.

"She has carried it to an absurd extreme, to a commercialized spectacle where 100,000 people congregate in a concrete oval to watch 22 men dive at each other and a small pigskin ball.

"It is a spectacle because few come for love of the game, while many come because it is socially 'au fait,' an exciting excuse for drinking and cheering."

Bares Story of Strange Mixup of Two Women Sharing One Man's Affection

Copyright, 1931, for the Boston Evening American.

The Boston Evening American publishes herewith the complete story of the strangest love tangle in modern life.

Her child, Peter, aged two.

The child's father, Ernest William A. Connor, 52, Malden construction engineer, M. I. T. graduate.

Conner's wife, the former Inez Noah Priest, of Malden, who sacrificed her first husband and her own child for Conner's love 20 years ago, then shared that love with Miss Gledhill, lived with her and cared for her child.

It is a story of bizarre love, of raw drama and of tragic situations of the Eugene O'Neil type written into real life by a triangle that became a quadrangle with the birth of Conner's son to Miss Gledhill and the acceptance of the

The plan for 12-hour parking—and all its amendments—was cast into the discard for two months, together with all other suggestions for solutions of the muddle.

Meeting with Mayor Curley and the traffic commission in City Hall, Fred S. Snyder, president of the Chamber of Commerce, promptly agreed to a suggestion of Mayor Curley that any changes in rules be deferred until that date.

Snyder was backed by an array of downtown department store heads and business men who were prepared to fight the 12-hour plan.

STATE ACTS TO TAKE 5 IN BABY CASE

Worcester, Dec. 1—With one baby taken dead from a shallow grave in the cellar and another in Worcester City Hospital, with malnutrition, unable to walk or talk and blind in one eye, welfare officials moved today to take away five other children from Mrs. Eva Karlson, 38.

Under arrest on minor charges, Mrs. Karlson of Cambridge st., was bailed in $200 today, while Alphonse Myatt, 51, alleged father of the dead infant and the 22-months old child in the hospital, remained in jail, unable to secure bail.

They claim the infant found buried died after a natural illness and Medical Examiner Frederick H. Baker, because of decomposition, was unable to determine anything in an autopsy today except that no bones were broken.

Ernest D. Gladston, former Boston social worker and now Worcester agent of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, announced today that he had conferred with officers of the probation department and will start action in juvenile court to have the other children taken from Mrs. Karlson and placed in care of the State.

Mrs. Karlson's husband is now serving a term of 15 to 20 years in State Prison for burglary.

Although police say the child in the hospital, Helen, is a daughter of Mrs. Karlson and that Myatt is the father, she disclaimed parentage of Helen and declared the child's mother is in Pawtucket, R. I.

Police found the blind girl and the body of the infant while attempting to learn the identity yesterday of another infant whose body was found buried last Friday in an unused section of Notre Dame cemetery.

200 RUM DIVES RUNNING WIDE OPEN IN LAWRENCE

OPENLY FLOUT LAW AS IN OLD DAYS

Masked Reporter Finds Getting a Drink the Easiest Thing to Do There

This is the second of a series on liquor, lotteries and other illicit incomes at Lawrence.

By THE MASKED REPORTER
(Copyright, 1931, by the Boston Evening American.)

Arriving in Lawrence a total stranger, I drifted in and out of 10 speakeasies, all close to the heart of the city, within two hours and had no trouble getting beer or booze in any one of them.

It is just as simple as in the days before prohibition.

Easier, in fact, because in those days Lawrence had 80 saloons; now there are 200.

In those days, liquor dealers were licensed and strictly regulated. Now, only their conscience is their guide. Not a very good guide, judging by the brand of liquor I found most of them selling.

I had no trouble getting in.

And I had no trouble getting what I wanted after I got in.

Every place I entered in this first swift survey was without the aid of an introduction or any pretense on my part whatsoever. I was just another thirsty individual.

What occasionally happens, to hoodwink the public, I will divulge later. For the present let me say that official action, on the rare occasions when it is taken, has the paradoxical result of strengthening the feeling of security of these lawbreakers. Why this is so, will be made plain in due course.

Parking my car in Essex st., I walked into the nearest drugstore and called for a bromo-seltzer.

After downing it I said to the clerk:

"Got any idea where a fellow can get something to put him on his feet?"

"Something for that 'morning-after' feeling?" he asked, with a laugh.

"And how," I said.

ONLY CHURCHES AND MILLS

"Well," he said, confidentially, "just don't try any churches or mills, but if there is any other place in town you can't get a drink, let me know. It will save my time in the future.

"You won't have any trouble," he added seriously.

"O. K.," I said, "but where's a good place?"

"Go down to McCarthy's on the right hand side of this street," he replied. "On Essex, just beyond Newbury st."

It was easy, and I soon found out that it wasn't any more difficult finding scores of places.

I crossed Essex st. and wandered along until I came to a small store that very evidently was "McCarthy's."

I opened the door and went in. In the partition to my left a peep-hole was opened and the face of a man appeared, framed in the opening.

PEEP-HOLE RELIC

My opening of the door had sounded a faint buzzer under the bar, as I discovered when another customer entered later on.

But the bartender's momentary survey of me was very superficial, standing in the dim light as I was, and it was apparent he had no qualms.

"How about some beer?" I said to the face in the peephole.

The face disappeared and I heard the bolt sliding back.

I walked into the inner sanctum.

He poured my beer from a bottle and charged me 10 cents for it.

The bar was a regular old-style one, ante-dating prohibition. Behind it was a large mirror, and above the mirror a sign reading:

"Open from 6 till 11."

It was a dingy place, with the usual room behind a partition at the rear for "serious drinkers."

Like all the places that I visited this speakeasy had a cash register as a check on the bartender.

Behind the bar was a telephone, which I afterwards found had an unlisted number. I noticed that the bartender was never more than a step or two from the instrument. In case of a "raid," he evidently expected to be forewarned. And well he might.

GLAD TO GET OUT

One of the card players in the back room left the game long enough to order and consume a ten-cent pork pie and a bottle of beer, and as he was served the relief bartender came on duty, taking the greasy apron from the man on duty.

The sight and smell of that dime pork pie were my cue to leave, and a moment later I departed with a strong desire for fresh air.

I walked over to Concord st., and my eyes picked out what looked like a "dive" at No. 95. It was.

HONESTY SAVES HIM FROM JAIL

Manuel Reposa, of Battery st., North End, couldn't tell a lie—especially to Sergt. Robert J. Mooney of the Hanover st. station.

His truthfulness to Sergt. Mooney saved him from a six months' sentence in the House of Correction today when he was found guilty by Judge Michael J. Murray in Municipal court of keeping and exposing liquor for sale.

Sergt. Mooney told the court that Reposa admitted selling a pint to an officer.

"Yes, I sold a pint to that man. I didn't know he was a cop, and I will not lie to you, Mr. Mooney. I know much good work you have done around here," Sergt. Mooney quoted Reposa.

"He was very fair under the circumstances," Judge Murray remarked.

The court suspended the six months' sentence when Sergt. Mooney said Reposa was leaving the state to go to work.

HOLLYWOOD FOR DRY LAW

Why Spoil It All By Repeal?

By JOHN P. MEDBURY
Special Hollywood Correspondent International News Service

Copyright, 1931, By International News Service

Hollywood, Dec. 1 (INS)—The movie capital was but mildly interested today in the poll of members of the 72d Congress to find out where this body stands on the question of submitting the eighteenth amendment to a vote of the people.

Some Hollywood residents are skeptical about repealing the prohibition law; they don't want to do anything which might interfere with their pleasures.

The bootleggers, however, are visibly worried and hope that nothing definite will be done until summer as they are planning to enter several rum runners in next year's Olympic games.

Southern California may be alcoholically wrong, but we're geographically right as we're only 137 miles from Tijuana, Mex., as the old crow flies.

In Tijuana an American eagle will get you four Mexican swallows.

There are several trains daily across the border and every railroad ticket allows you a 24-hour hangover at San Diego. It wont be long now until Mexico will be flying the American flagon as we are rapidly annexing that country now bottle by bottle.

Congress may know what it's doing but a straw vote never will be successful until the straws are in a cocktail.

Folks in this town ingurgitate the same as folks in other big cities but as Los Angeles was dry by local option before the prohibition law was passed we naturally got a head start on the rest of the country.

No matter what Congress does, California will supply the oranges, which leaves 47 other states to furnish the gin.

SHINY CAN LED TO KILLING

Newark, N. J., Dec. 1 (AP)—Henry Martell, described as a parole violator from Connecticut, stole a can of sardines today and died because a policeman thought the shiny tin was a revolver.

HORRORS WOMAN SAW WITH DREISER

Adelaide Walker, Actress, Pictures Conditions in Kentucky as "Outrageous"

Miners' Families Hungry, Cold, Unwashed and Usually Uncared For

ADELAIDE WALKER

Mrs. Adelaide Walker, actress and wife of Charles Rumford Walker, an author, was a member of Theodore Dreiser's national committee for the defense of political prisoners' party, which recently toured the coal fields of Kentucky to investigate conditions there. Mrs. Walker, in the accompanying article, tells what she saw and heard.

Secretary of the National Committee for the Defense of Political Prisoners.

New York, Dec. 1—I went to Kentucky with Theodore Dreiser's party of writers on an investigation tour of the coal mine districts. What we saw there is almost beyond belief. It was stark starvation and poverty at its worst.

We saw men who battle in the bowels of the earth from dawn to dark to eke out a miserable day's wage of a dollar—a dollar that they seldom if ever see. They are paid in scrip, and this scrip returns to the mine owners, who own the deplorable hovels in which the miners and their families live. The companies also own the stores from which the worker are forced to buy the meager supplies of food and clothing.

OUTRAGES DESCRIBED.

We heard first hand and saw evidences of brutalities. During the recent strike, we learned, the companies, fearing the awakening of the miners, imported hired thugs, whom they designated as guards. Men were shot down: men and women assaulted, soup kitchens dynamited. But there was never an indictment. On the other hand, when a deputy was killed in a fracas between miners and owners, nearly a dozen miners were indicted on a charge of first degree murder.

We found the hovels in which the miners' families exist unfit for cattle to live in, the food could hardly pass muster before even a most lax health board.

These men, women and children who have to live under such vile conditions are Americans and for the most part, of very old American stock. Strange as it may seem, they are unusually intelligent, although for the most part they lack schooling. Schools, wherever they are found are very rarely supported by the state. For those supported by the companies, a cut is made from the wages of each miner. For the most part, even where there is a school, the children are unable to attend, because they lack clothing.

NO SOAP, NO BATHS

The people have no amusements. They make their own, when they can, by going to the church and by delivering speeches, mainly on religious subjects. They are deeply religious and well versed in the Bible. They spend much of their time praying and preaching and none in stirring up strife or disorder.

They cannot keep clean because they have no soap. I asked one of the women why an effort at cleanliness was not made and the women said: "We can't make soap any more. The fat we used for soap, we now eat."

NEW EVIDENCE FOUND TO AID NOBLE BOY

Attorney Has Unheard Witness; Story of an "Accomplice" Is Repudiated

Attempts to involve a second man in the slaying of Mrs. Clara E. C. Ellis were denied today by Atty. George A. Douglas, counsel for Russell B. Noble, following the entry of Maj. Ralph T. Heard into the case to defend the memory of the dead woman.

Douglas disclaimed the story which appeared in certain Boston newspapers alleging that another man was present at the time the youth visited the widow's Haverhill home. He said the boy's true story was the one which appeared exclusively last week in the Boston Evening American.

NEW WITNESS

At the same time Atty. Douglas, who is leading young Noble's fight for freedom from State prison, revealed that on the word a hitherto unnamed witness rests the chance of the 18-year-old youth for clemency.

The attorney's statement came on the heels of an admission by Major Heard at Haverhill that he was the unnamed man who visited Mrs. Ellis' home on the night of her slaying. The army officer talked freely about the case and expressed surprise that his name should be linked in the slaying.

He admitted he and Mrs. Ellis had been good friends and added that she was a woman of irreproachable character. He denied knowing Noble and said he had never heard of him until he confessed the slaying.

BROTHER'S STORY "WILD"

Atty. Douglas said he had no intention of questioning Maj. Heard and never considered involving him in the case. He admitted that his report, which will eventually be laid before the authorities, would include facts regarding the major's visit to the Ellis home on the night she was beaten.

"We have never attempted to involve another man as the murderer in this case," Atty. Douglas said today. "Russell Noble never said anything like that. His story as told to me is the same as appeared in the Boston Evening American last week. He maintained then and still maintains, that he went to the Ellis home by invitation and that the robbery he committed there was not premeditated.

"The other story, mentioning some other man, as appeared in certain Boston newspapers, is a wild tale coming from Russell's older brother. We disclaimed this story before and we still disclaim it."

TO QUESTION MAID

Atty. Douglas then revealed that he was searching for another man and also planned to question Agnes Reardon, former maid employed by Mrs. Ellis, who has been located in the home of a prominent Haverhill family.

According to the counsel for the youth, the mysterious witness resided in Newburyport until three days ago. At that time he disappeared and Atty. Douglas has now launched a search for him.

"This witness is vitally important to my client's case," said Atty. Douglas. "I am extremely anxious to find and question him in connection with the circumstances which led to the boy's plea of second degree murder.

"I have learned that he has been a resident of Newburyport up until a few days ago, and am having an intensive search made for him. His testimony may be the one link necessary to complete the chain of evidence in our case."

Young Noble himself, in a communication from Charlestown prison, made public by his attorney, has declared he would dare the electric for a chance to tell the true story of the murder night.

In this communication to Atty. Douglas, he said:

"I will tell my story and face death in the chair. I want to tell the real story of what happened in that room. I want to tell it from the witness stand.

"I am confident that I will be found innocent upon the facts. If I have to be electrocuted for telling the truth, then let me be electrocuted."

5 WOMEN JOIN 'IDLE MARCH'

Five women and 35 men, Boston's contribution to the "hunger march" of the Communists on Washington, set off for the nation's capital in two trucks from Boston Common this afternoon.

A quiet meeting, sponsored by the Unemployed Council and held on the Charles st. mall, preceded the start of the "march." About 1000 men and women attended, including Police Supt. Crowley, Deputy Supt. McDevitt, Lieut. Jeremiah Gallivan and 10 patrolmen from Station 4.

A number of speakers addressed the gathering by right of a permit granted to John J. King, chairman of the Unemployed Council, and amid the cheers of their followers the delegation set off for Providence, where more "marchers" will be picked up.

PASTOR AIDING JOBLESS FINED

Rev. Paul Noyes of Harding ave., Belmont, appealed a $10 fine before Judge Donovan in municipal court today on a charge of speaking on the Common without a permit.

Patrolman James E. Cusick testified that he arrested Rev. Mr. Noyes a week ago Sunday at the Parkman Bandstand, where he was soliciting meat for sandwiches for the unemployed.

"People have the right to feed squirrels and pigeons on the Common," Rev. Mr. Noyes told the court. "I went there for the sole purpose of giving bread to the hungry. I had 25 loaves of bread which were donated, but no meat to make sandwiches.

"I didn't want money, but meat. Some persons tossed money, but I didn't pick it up."

Judge Donovan reminded him of the charge and stated:

"You were doing a lawful thing in an unlawful manner."

BONUSES SLIM IN WALL ST.

Tientsin, Dec 1 (INS)—United States Marines, bound for Peiping where they are to be stationed as a Legation guard, refused today to permit Japanese soldiers to search cars on the Peiping-Mukden Railway in which they were riding.

Mukden, Dec. 1 (INS)—Hostilities are threatening simultaneously in both north and south Manchuria, according to a communique issued today by Japanese military headquarters here.

It was stated movement of 3000 Japanese troops into the Tsitsihar area was due to menacing activities by an equal number of Chinese troops, leading to the fear an attempt would be made to recapture the Heilungkiang capital.

Chinese forces at Chinchow are also being strengthened, the communique said, although all Japanese forces have been withdrawn east of the Liao river.

JAPS SUFFER COLD.

The commander of the Chinese army menacing Tsitsihar was identified as Gen. Hsu Hao-Cheng, a subordinate of Gen. Mah Chan-Shang, who retired to Hailun, north of Harbin, after being defeated at Anganchi and Tsitsihar by the Japanese.

Officials here said the small detachment of Japanese soldiers at Tsitsihar were suffering severely from the cold, many having been frost-bitten, making it necessary to send reinforcements.

Heavy movements of Chinese troops into Chinchow by train was reported by Japanese observers, who said the Chinese reinforcements were being billeted inside the city.

R. R. BRIDGES WRECKED

In withdrawing from the Chinchow area the Japanese command moved all troops across the Liao River except for a consulate guard at Hsinmintun.

Japanese authorities had hoped to restore normal service on the Peiping-Mukden Railway today, but it was discovered at least three bridges had been wrecked, making it necessary to suspend service indefinitely.

BONUS BOOMED GILLETTE CO.

Figures showing that foreign shipments by the Gillette Safety Razor Company increased greatly after the directors voted a bonus to the managing officers were produced today by Damon E. Hall, counsel for minority stockholders in their $21,000,000 suit against certain directors.

The bonus was three per cent of the profits above $13,000,000, and goods were entered on the books as sold when shipped from the Boston factory, thereby adding to the profits immediately.

Atty. Hall, in questioning John E. Aldred of New York, one of the directors, introduced figures showing that goods shipped to foreign countries in December, 1928, totaled 4,165,079 packets. This was 2,724,281 more than in the next highest month of that year.

The managing officers of the company who shared in the bonus were Frank J. Fahey, Thomas W. Pelham and Ralph E. Thompson.

"As chairman of the board, did it not occur to you that voting this bonus might instill in these officers a desire to increase shipments, thereby increasing profits and consequently increasing the bonus they would receive?" Aldred was asked.

"I was opposed to the bonus system of compensation and did not vote for the bonus," was his answer.

"The bonus was pretty tempting bait, wasn't it?" asked Atty. Hall.

"I wouldn't say so," replied Aldredth.

BELMONT'S BOOM BOTTLED

These windows in the home of Galen D. Light, Northeastern University secretary, 3 Preble Garden rd., Belmont, were shattered by an explosion and Light was sprayed with glass. Boys were blamed.

Police Chief O'Brien of Belmont discovered today that the explosion was caused when a bottle of the old-fashioned flashlight powder photographers used to use went off with a loud boom!

FLASH POWDER IN 'BOMBING'

A bottle of photographers' old-fashioned flashlight powder was the "bomb" that exploded last night outside the home of Galen D. Light, secretary of Northeastern University, Belmont police said today.

The explosion shattered windows and sprayed Light with glass as he sat in the sun parlor.

Police say that boys probably had found a full bottle of the powder, which now is rarely used by photographers, wrapped it in paper, lighted it and ran away. The blackened bottle and charred paper were found near Light's home today.

The explosion lighted up the district brilliantly.

AGED REFORMER ADMITS HAVING BEER PARTY

Says He Doesn't Know How Whiskey Got in His Pocket; He Had No Gun Permit

Chicago, Dec. 1 (INS)—By the slender thread of a fast-fading life today hung the question of whether Daniel L. Gilday, elderly church deacon and dry crusader, must go through the ordeal of a trial for murder.

While the reformer sat in his Engelwood cell, the state moved to bring him to justice for the shooting of Herman Knol, 17, Boy Scout, who says he was trying to help Gilday when a bullet from the latter's gun entered his abdomen.

SHOT WITHOUT CAUSE.

Upon the outcome of young Knol's battle for life rests the question of whether Gilday will face trial for murder or whether he will be charged with assault with intent to kill.

According to the wounded youth, he and a companion were on their way to church when they met Gilday staggering along the street. They started to help him to his home when he suddenly produced a revolver and shot the Knol youth, according to the latter, who was substantiated by his companion, Herman Alkema.

Although he admitted having consumed a few glasses of beer Sunday shortly before the shooting, Gilday maintained that he was under the impression that Knol and his companion were trying to rob him.

NO PISTOL PERMIT

The veteran reformer could not account for the discovery on his person of a half-consumed bottle of whiskey, saying that he had not purchased the liquor.

Pat Roche, chief investigator for the state attorney's office, said he had given Gilday an investigator's badge, but that the reformer was not entitled thereby to carry a gun.

Roche said Gilday had "co-operated" with him in a number of investigations.

SENATORS MAY BAR BANKHEAD

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP)—A report recommending that the Senate deny a seat to Senator-elect John H. Bankhead, Democrat, Alabama, is being prepared by Chairman Hastings of the elections sub-committee considering the contest against him.

Hastings is citing several hundred cases of alleged irregularities in the election in which Bankhead defeated former Senator Heflin as grounds for denying a seat to the senator-elect.

No efforts are expected to be made to prevent Bankhead from taking his seat when the Senate convenes, however.

Under Hastings' plan, action will come when the committee report is submitted.

Hartford, Ct., Dec. 1 (AP)—The mortuary where the body of Robert Ames, stage and screen actor, has lain for two days, was closed to the public today for the simple funeral services after about 7000 persons had filed past the bier.

Police estimated five thousand viewed the body yesterday, and two thousand the previous day. A throng gathered in the vicinity today for the services.

Members of the Ames family planned a simple service, attended only by relatives and boyhood friends and a group of friends from New York. The list of pallbearers included Raymond Walburn of New York and Clarence Schumway of New Rochelle, as well as friends here.

The Rev. F. H. Jacobs of the Fourth Congregational Church was in charge. No services were planned at the grave in Cedar Hill cemetery.

BORAH, IN ART, IS ROUGH

"Do I Look Like That?" Asks Senator; Assured, He Says, "It's All Right With Me!"

New York, Dec. 1 (AP)—"Do I look like that?" asked William E. Borah, senator from Idaho.

"Exactly like that to me," replied Sheila Burlingame of St. Louis, who had just finished modeling a head of the Senate leader.

"Are you going to leave it rough?"

"Yes, but I'll make another smooth one if you wish."

"Well," said Mr. Borah, "I don't know much about art, but if you want it that way, it's all right with me."

An account of this dialogue bobbed up today as Senator Borah's massive head, in bronze, went on a pedestal in the John Levy Galleries.

The bronze of Senator Borah was ordered by friends. He posed for 20 minutes each day last winter in the Senate foreign relations committee room. The posing came hard for him at first. After a few days he became a sympathetic, interested subject.

Mrs. Burlingame considered him her most thrilling commission—and she left the clay rough, just as finger and tool built it up, because Borah's "is a fluid personality, rugged, sincere."

POPE TO ISSUE ENCYCLICAL

Vatican City, Dec. 1 (AP)—Pope Pius XI. will issue an encyclical just before Christmas commemorating the 1500th anniversary of the Council of Ephesus. It will be his fifth this year.

The Council of Ephesus excommunicated Nestorius of Constantinople and condemned as heresy his teachings that Christ had two distinct natures, divine and human, existing separately, and that the Virgin Mary was not the mother of God.

It is expected that in the forthcoming encyclical the Pontiff will appeal for reunion of the Nestorian or East Syrian church, now centered in Persia and Turkey, with the Roman Catholic Church, and that the encyclical also will exalt the Virgin Mary.

The Pope has ordered extensive celebrations on the anniversary of Ephesus, and on Dec. 27 will be borne in procession into St. Peter's to celebrate the mass.

TRUSTEE WOULD NOT TELL OF HER RICHES

Wyman on Stand Refutes Testimony of the Widow's "Four-Day Spree"

Salem, Dec. 1—An attempt by Richard Bennett, New York attorney, to get information about Mrs. Adelaide Pierce Davis' income was blocked by a trustee of her first husband's estate, it was testified today at the Davis will hearing.

Bennett, who was rescued when Mrs. Davis was downed in Lake Suntaug last summer on a midnight boating party and who, according to previous testimony, was called "lover" by her, was rebuffed in his income queries by Henry L. Wyman of New York, the trustee.

Wyman, assistant treasurer of the American Radiator & Sanitary Heating Co., in which Mrs. Davis was a large stockholder, testified also that he never had seen Mrs. Davis intoxicated or under the influence of drugs.

NEVER SAW HER DRUNK.

He was questioned just before the plaintiff's case closed.

Q.—Did you see Mrs. Pierce Davis at the funeral of her first husband? A.—She was heavily veiled, sir. I could not see her.

Q.—Did you ever see her intoxicated? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever see her when she had glassy eyes? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever see her when you thought her under the influence of drugs—notably veronal? A.—No.

Q.—Was she always able to carry on a coherent, intelligible conversation when you talked to her? A.—Yes.

HE MET BENNETT

Under cross-examination by Atty. James W. Sullivan the trustee declared he had not known of litigation Grant Pierce was in with the John B. Pierce estate.

Q.—As a matter of fact, whatever suggestions you made as a trustee of the estate of Mrs. Adelaide Pierce Davis, she adopted, didn't she? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you know Richard Bennett? A.—I met him once. He came into my office.

Q.—On her business? A.—Yes.

Q.—When? A.—I think in 1929.

Q. You knew that during all this correspondence you have testified to here today, Bennett was acting with and for her, didn't you? A. No, I did not.

WOULDN'T TELL HIM

Q. When did you meet Bennett? A. He came into my office in October, 1929, and was seeking information as to the John B. Pierce estate distribution. He said that Mrs. Davis had sent him and that she wanted to know what the Pierce estate had distributed to her in 1928 and 1929, and I said I would answer that question to Mrs. Davis herself. I said to him, "I have no specific instructions from her to answer any questions you ask." I didn't know Bennett at all.

Q.—So that a total stranger came into your office, sent by Mrs. Adelaide Pierce Davis, to ask you how much the estate of her first husband had distributed to her? A.—No, not a total stranger. I had been introduced to him by Mrs. Davis at her hotel in New York. I recognized him as a man I had met.

REFUTES "SPREE" STORY.

Q.—What he was to her in a business way, you did not know? A.—No.

Q.—Did she tell you that Bennett was in Florida with her? A.—No.

Q.—Did you know that she had any advice from Bennett in Florida? A.—No.

During the time in September, 1929, when Mrs. Davis previously has been declared to have been on a four-day "spree" she wrote several letters to Wyman and talked with him rationally over the telephone, he testified.

According to previous testimony from the diary of her former butler, James Sinclair, the woman was on a "four-day drunk" between September 20 and 24, and had been drinking liquor two of these days without eating a meal.

Wyman's testimony revealed that in that year Mrs. Davis' quarterly income from the estate was nearly $18,000.

On April 12, 1929, he testified, she wrote him acknowledging receipt of two certificates totaling 97,600 shares of American Radiator stock, and on May 6 she wrote from Miami, Fla., acknowledging receipt of a check for $17,487.97, income from the estate, due her for the

MALDEN WIFE IN TRIANGLE OF LOVE

A chance street meeting of Mr. and Mrs. Conner with Miss Gledhill in Montreal three years ago completely altered the lives of all three.

Conner, son of a local contractor, brother of a former Malden city official, was a successful engineer, earning $25,000 a year, happy in the companionship of the former Malden girl even though their own romance had broken up a home.

Mrs. Conner, middle-aged, attractive, led a happy domestic life, traveling throughout the country with her husband to the locale of whatever work his profession called him.

Miss Gledhill, noted swimmer, field hockey star, model for advertising posters of the Canadian Pacific Railroad, had no thoughts except of athletics.

DIVIDING HIS LOVE

There was no Peel, then.

Today Conner is in Vermont State prison, serving three years for forgery, still dividing, in letters of adoration contained in the same envelope, his love between the two women.

Mrs. Conner, choosing between her own Malden family and the son of her husband by "the other woman," is caring for the child in the Floral Park, N. Y., home she and Miss Gledhill have shared since last September, when Conner was jailed.

And Miss Gledhill is bound by the tragic threads of her mixed-up love affair to a hospital cot in Mineola, N. Y., suffering from a nervous breakdown resulting from her fear that she was to be deported to Canada on a charge of moral turpitude.

The drama may yet have a typical O'Neill climax—in death—for after showing signs of improvement yesterday, the Canadian beauty took a turn for the worse last night and oxygen was again administered to keep her alive.

Or, Mrs. Conner may relinquish Peel to Mrs. Gledhill's mother, who is en route from Montreal to her daughter's bedside—in which case she is welcome to return to the home of her sister, Mrs. Mary E. Ogden, in Malden's exclusive West Side.

The story goes back beyond the meeting of Mr. and Mrs. Conner with Miss Gledhill, however. It goes back to Sept. 17, 1902, when Inez Noah, just graduated from Malden high school, married Russell P. Priest, son of Rev. Samuel R. Priest, a Unitarian minister.

They were married in the First Universalist Church in Malden by Rev. James F. Albion. Miss Gledhill wasn't born then.

In 1904, a son Benjamin, was born to the Priests and in 1908 the present Mrs. Conner was divorced by Priest in Middlesex probate court.

ACCUSED BY HUSBAND

Conner appeared in the public picture for the first time then, named as correspondent by Priest, who charged his wife with misconduct at divers places on the Pacific Coast with Conner.

Inez Noah already had found Conner's attraction too great; she didn't contest the suit. Priest won a decree nisi and custody of the boy, Benjamin, and his divorced wife passed out of his life. She already had joined Conner. When and where they were married has not been disclosed.

Gossip and scandal attending her divorce kept them away from their native city but they gained consolation in mutual, undivided regard until Miss Gledhill entered their lives 20 years later and Mrs. Conner found herself compelled to share the love for which she sacrificed so much.

A Christian inspiration, and the belief that she could win her husband away from Miss Gledhill, prompted Mrs. Conner to accept with complacency a domestic situation surpassing fiction.

She told her story from beginning to end today while she held Peel in her lap and rumpled his fair hair and called him "My boy."

STILL LOVES HIM

"I still love him," she said of her husband.

"Mr. Conner and I were in Montreal a few years ago when a girl, crying, passed us on the street. It turned out to be Miss Gledhill.

"My husband inquired if he could be of any assistance and she said she had been insulted by a cab driver. We took her home. That was the start of the affair between them."

During the ensuing two years and a half Conner divided his time and his love between the two women. It was Miss Gledhill who most often accompanied him on his travels to different construction jobs. She was with him in Boston, in Harwichport on the Cape, with him in Maine.

Mrs. Conner was fully aware of the situation but believed she could make her husband forget the younger and more attractive woman.

"At first I thought she was to blame, but after I read some of the letters he wrote her, I felt that he was about 75 per cent responsible," she said.

"At one time I contemplated divorce, but my husband begged me not to, saying that he loved me."

Meanwhile, Conner's work suffered and his expenses increased and to provide the money with which to carry on his affairs which had become increasingly tangled with the birth of Peel in Portchester, N. Y., he resorted to forgery.

OLD-FASHIONED WIFE

He left Mrs. Conner in New York one day last September, admitting that he was going to visit Miss Gledhill, whom he had installed in the Floral Park home. It was there that detectives hired by Vermont banks he had defrauded took him into custody.

"When he went to prison, it seemed the Christian thing to do to have Miss Gledhill and her baby come live with me. I am an old-fashioned wife. We got along splendidly."

She described Miss Gledhill as a vivacious girl, an accomplished sportswoman, French scholar and musician.

She expressed the belief that she and "the other woman" would have continued to live happily together until Conner's release from prison if her sister, Mrs. Ogden, had not interfered.

MYSTERY MEN

She said she believed Mrs. Ogden had notified immigration authorities regarding Miss Gledhill and that two claimed immigration officers who visited the Floral Park home a few days ago were responsible for the girl's nervous breakdown, which was at first believed an illness resulting from a suicide attempt.

Mrs. Ogden has denied this to the Boston Evening American and immigration officials have denied sending any officers to see Miss Gledhill so the identity of the two men is still a mystery.

It was Mrs. Conner who revealed the existence of the amazing correspondence that has passed between her husband and herself and Miss Gledhill since his imprisonment.

"OUT OF RHYTHM."

The letters protesting his love for each were penned by Conner in his cell and sent to the women in a single envelope and the two women read each other's notes in perfect amity.

Mrs. Conner made no attempt to reconcile her husband's contradictory protestations of love. She merely remarked, calmly and philosophically:

"He is out of rhythm with life."

With the same stoic complacency she exhibited letters written to her and to Miss Gledhill.

One of the letters to Mrs. Conner read:

"My dear wife: I am looking forward to the time I get out of here when you and I may start life anew. I know I have caused you much grief and misery but you must know that I regret it all. I know you understand me and the world and that you will find it in your big forgiving heart to forgive me."

The letter to Miss Gledhill said:

"My darling May: I am counting the days when I will be with you again. Separation from you is maddening. I love you with heart and soul and I know you love me. Be brave and patient and soon we will be together again with our love."

Still another letter to Mrs. Conner said in part:

"Dearest Inez: If I get word from you and May and Sonny I can stand it all right and the time will soon pass. The justification for a pardon is that I am needed outside in the world to take care of all of you. For Sonny's sake, be tolerant."

The son was born to Miss Gledhill in Portchester, N. Y., two years ago, Mrs. Conner said, but she was unaware of the situation until last September. At that time her husband was arrested and she first met the Gledhill girl, who was living in the Elm st. house in Floral Park.

And to Miss Gledhill, he wrote:

"Dearest May: You know I did not measure anything in money, for I gave my last dollar and always would for you and Sonny. I measured my happiness by love, trust and faith in our home. I am here because I got money wrongly so that you and Sonny would not starve and be without a home. You and Sonny are in my heart and soul every minute that I live. You can sell anything at home you wish—my clothes, cases and trunks. But for God's sake keep Sonny fed. His picture and yours stay with me always."

The suggestion that Mrs. Conner's sympathy for Miss Gledhill may have been born of her recollection of her own transgressions for Conner's love was made by the latter's sister, Mrs. Etta L. Marshall, who owns a Malden dress manufacturing concern.

"I have not seen or heard from my brother for more than 25 years," Mrs. Marshall said. "As a matter of fact, I have not seen him since he married Mrs. Priest, who left here with him and went to Seattle, where they were married.

"Mrs. Priest left her former husband and a young son here and went West with Ernest.

LIKE HER OWN CASE.

"The first I heard of my brother in all these years I read in the paper."

Asked if she had any idea why her sister-in-law took Miss Gledhill into her home, she answered:

"The only reason I can offer is she probably remembered the time when she left her own son behind her and the thoughts of that act no doubt aroused her sympathy for the plight of the Glendill girl."

Interviewed at her Malden home, Mrs. Ogden blamed Miss Gledhill for all the trouble that had befallen Mrs. Conner, and said her sister would be welcomed back by her Malden relatives whenever she dropped her friendship for the "other woman."

In an exclusive interview with the Evening American, Mrs. Ogden said:

BLAMES "SKI GIRL"

"If Inez says I am responsible for her present trouble, she is not telling the truth. Ever since she married William Conner, who, incidentally is her second husband, she has had and has been in all kinds of trouble.

"Every member of our family has opposed him from the time she first started to keep company with him. We urged her years ago to drop him and forget him but she seemed impressed with him and refused to give him up.

"This girl, Miss Gledhill, has been the cause of all the trouble. Conner travelled with her all over the country. Last summer he was with her at Harwichport down on Cape Cod and also in Maine. They also stayed in Boston, Hartford, Stamford and Portchester.

"For some reason that none of us can explain, Inez has the peculiar notion that she must remain with this girl and take care of her. Every member of the family has been making efforts to have her come back home, and she is still welcome, but she refuses to leave this Gledhill girl.

"After Conner ran through what money he and Inez had, he started to forge checks on friends of both families. I don't know how much money he got on these checks, but when they are all checked up and totalled he will probably face many years in prison.

DETECTIVES ON TRAIL

"When his many check forgeries began to appear, detectives came to Malden and started to check up on him. They visited our home and talked with me and my husband. In one of our several discussions on the forgeries my husband mentioned the matter of this girl and her influence on Conner. My husband knew very little about this girl and he referred the detectives to members of Conner's family, who apparently supplied them with additional information.

"This Miss Gledhill has been the cause of all the unhappiness and scandal in our family and I see no reason why she shouldn't be sent back where she belongs. She has no right to be here and she is causing nothing but trouble by being here.

"If Inez is helping her in any way, I have no idea how she is doing it. To my knowledge she has no funds of her own. As long as she insists on remaining with that girl, her family will have nothing to do with her.

"If she will agree to drop her companionship with this girl and forget her, she is welcome to return to us at any time. We all want her home and we have wanted her especially since we learned of her present predicament. We are all willing to care for her if she does come home. She knows that."

Meanwhile, in the Vermont State Prison in Windsor, Conner said:

"It isn't true, that stuff in the papers about me."

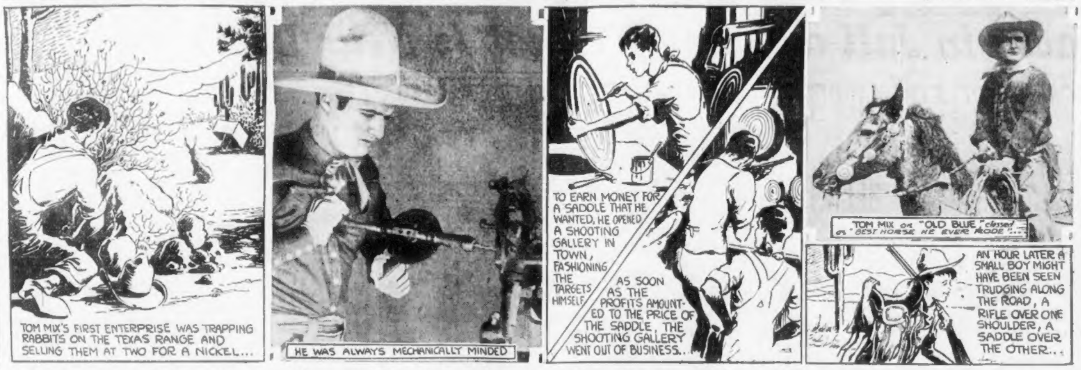
Questioned, he said:

"My lawyer has told me to say nothing; that's all."

He has a job helping tend the prison store.

Mrs. Conner was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Noah. She is a descendant of the Cox family, which settled in Boston in 1628 and has been prominent in Malden for generations.

TOM MIX ✤ Dream of Saddle Comes True ✤ --by DOROTHY ROE



TOM MIX'S FIRST ENTERPRISE WAS TRAPPING RABBITS ON THE TEXAS RANGE AND SELLING THEM AT TWO FOR A NICKEL...
HE WAS ALWAYS MECHANICALLY MINDED
TO EARN MONEY FOR A SADDLE THAT HE WANTED, HE OPENED A SHOOTING GALLERY IN TOWN, FASHIONING THE TARGETS HIMSELF
AS SOON AS THE PROFITS AMOUNTED TO THE PRICE OF THE SADDLE, THE SHOOTING GALLERY WENT OUT OF BUSINESS...
TOM MIX ON "OLD BLUE," classed as "BEST HORSE HE EVER RODE"...
AN HOUR LATER A SMALL BOY MIGHT HAVE BEEN SEEN TRUDGING ALONG THE ROAD, A RIFLE OVER ONE SHOULDER, A SADDLE OVER THE OTHER...

The first money ever earned by Tom Mix, the boy who was later to draw down a million a year, was from trapping rabbits on the Texas range. That was when Tom was about 10 years old. He made his traps, caught his rabbits and sold them at two for a nickel. The one goal of his life at that time was to own a real saddle. But rabbits at two for a nickel made the going slow, and so, when an Eastern relative sent him a .22 rifle for Christmas, he had a big idea. He opened a shooting gallery in the town nearest his father's ranch.

What a business for a boy who thought and dreamed of the horse and the gun.

Always mechanically minded, he fashioned the targets himself, both swinging and fixed, and opened up in an unused paint shop. Every night he counted his earnings, and every day he visited the saddle shop of Joe Gluntz. There was one particular saddle he wanted. It was a boy's size, and the most elegant saddle young Tom had ever visioned in his wildest dreams. One night he counted his riches again. He had just $29.10. The saddle cost $31.50. He needed $2.40 more—and his biggest day's business at the shooting gallery never had netted that much. But the morrow was Saturday, and he lived in hope.

Fate was kind to Tom Mix, just as it always has been. A couple of business men came in the next day and started a shooting contest. Tom loaded and re-loaded the rifle. When they had finished they paid him $32.55. And at that minute the shooting gallery closed up and went out of business. An hour later a small boy might have been seen trudging toward home, a rifle over one shoulder, a saddle over the other, and he walked so fast he might have seemed a fugitive from justice hitting for the nearby Mexican border. Here was a happy boy, in a happy Wild West setting—his whistling and song added to the setting.

Tom Mix has described the incident himself.

"He was just a boy with a saddle," said Tom—"a saddle no one could use but himself, unless he himself loaned it. And he wasn't loaning it to anybody in all that big State of Texas. Carefully and tenderly wrapped up each night, it was tucked under his bed. His was the great joy of possession, for he knew the saddle's value. He knew the effort he had exchanged for the money to buy it. He felt that he had earned it, and that saddle was his. That boy was I."

(The third instalment of the intimate, absorbing life story of Tom Mix will appear tomorrow.)

Had the 39 Clubs, But Knew No Golf, So He's Held for Theft

Five handsome golf bags and 39 shiny clubs seemed a little out of place to police in the home of Charles Robinson, Glover ct., South Boston, so Robinson appeared in court today.

What's more, golf-inclined police said Robinson seemed totally unfamiliar with even the general terms of golf.

And, on top of that, Victor B. Fowler of Hampden circle, Wollaston, said they were stolen from his car near the South Station a week ago.

Robinson was held in $1000 until December 7. The equipment was valued at $700.

Pope Protests Girls' Dance Near Vatican

London, Dec. 1 (INS)—A performance by a troupe of scantily clad dancing girls and a menagerie in the Piazza Prati Strozzi, adjacent to Vatican City, drew a protest from Pope Pius to the Italian authorities, according to a dispatch today in the Daily Herald from Rome.

The newspaper said the Pope objected to the gathering of crowds to witness the performance, calling attention to the Lateran treaty, which proclaimed the sacred character of the city of Rome.

ITALY BOOSTS ARMAMENTS AS DEBT IS CUT

By ROBERT B. HOWELL,
U. S. Senator from Nebraska.
Chairman of the Claims Committee
Written Exclusively for Universal Service.

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

In this second article on European war debts showing what the United States is paying in comparison to the amounts paid by the various debtor nations, the war debt of Italy is analyzed.

Washington, Dec. 1—Italy's war debt to the United States was $1,349,000,000. However, that is not all.

After the last gun was fired in the great war, our Secretary of the Treasury kept right on loaning Italy as though the war was still on.

He did not stop long enough, however, to ask the finance committee of the Senate to report out a bill approving such loans.

PEOPLE LOSE OUT

This post-war debt amounted to $801,000,000, making Italy's total debt on June 15, 1925, $2,150,000,000 plus.

Every dollar we loaned Italy was borrowed from our people and remains unpaid. As a consequence, it will have cost the United States to carry this Italian debt to the end of the present fiscal year—a period of seven years—some $624,000,000.

Now, mark you, all Italy will have helped us out during that time—and she has paid all she agreed to pay—is a total of $39,821,000. The difference of the two sums is our net cost of carrying this Italian debt, about $583,000,000.

Italy was to have paid us $14,706,000 more this year except for the President's moratorium.

PRINCIPAL CANCELLED

Italy's debt settlement is equivalent to the cancellation of the principal sum of her debt of $2,150,000,000 and the ultimate payment in lieu thereof of 1¼ per cent interest on the face of that debt for 62 years. Then Italy stops paying, the principal sum of her debt having been cancelled.

Why such a settlement? It was based on the high-sounding theory of ability to pay. The same theory was presumably invoked in the case of the Hungarian debt and though the amount involved was small, it will be discussed next.

(In tomorrow's article Sen. Howell will show how Hungary was granted supplies after the World War but was granted a cut-rate settlement in the identical form of that with Italy. The United States is paying the difference.)

BENNETT 'SNUB' IS REVEALED

quarterly period ending Dec. 31, 1928.

Wyman testified to several business-like letters she wrote to him subsequently and said that on May 31, 1929, she got a loan of $312,000 at the National City Bank in New York.

She wanted the loan, Wyman said, to take up her rights to purchase, for $25 a share, additional stock in the American Radiator Co., when it was selling at $50—making a profit of 100 per cent.

"I saw her execute a letter of transmittance on that occasion, and she also executed an irrevocable stock power document," Wyman testified.

Atty. Sullivan here said he would rest the case of the plaintiff, Mrs. Frechette, sister of Mrs. Davis, except that later he wished to call Dr. George Kline, state commissioner of mental diseases.

Counsel for the Davis estate called as the first witness, Dr. Arthur H. Crosbie of 530 Commonwealth ave., a kidney specialist, who testified that he operated on John B. Pierce on June 9, 1917, and that Pierce died on June 23.

To the best of the physician's knowledge, he said, Pierce was not told that he was near death, although there were about 10 days of this period, except for brief interludes of delirium, when he was able to place his affairs in condition.

Mrs. Pierce, later Mrs. Davis, was at the hospital every afternoon and evening, Dr. Crosbie said, and had been told that Pierce probably would not live.

WALKER HINTS AT PERJURY IN MOONEY CASE

San Francisco, Dec. 1 (AP)—After Frank P. Walsh had pleaded for two hours before Governor Rolph for a pardon for Tom Mooney, convicted parade bmber, Mayr Walker of New York took up the plea today.

"Diabolical" and "fiendish" were Walker's first words as he spoke of the explosion in July, 1916.

"The echo of the terrible shock was felt all over the American continent. It was not local.

"The despicable thing impressed everyone who heard. Never have I lost interest, although I was not intimately brought into the case immediately.

NOTABLE DAY

"This is a notable day. After 15 years, an open, fair hearing, full and thorough, is granted counsel for this petitioner.

"I am mindful of the responsibility resting on your excellency, but it rests on this side of the bench, too."

He launched at once into a reference to "perjured testimony."

"Duty is exacting and has responsibilities," he said. "Counsel espousing cause must share with officers of the law and prosecutors."

Referring to himself as "your humble servant" he said he had followed Cochrane and Walsh here to plead for Mooney.

STRONG ARM OF LAW

He spoke of the slaying of four "little children" in New York, and said except for the "strong arm of the law there would be very little left of this country."

The mayor said the story unfurled by Walsh today was the first public presentation of it.

Charles M. Fickert, who as district attorney prosecuted Mooney, expressed belief today it would be best to pardon him.

Fickert's belief was expressed in a letter to Mayor Walker in which he based his change of attitude on the opinion that Frank C. Oxman, one of the witnesses in Mooney's trial, gave perjured testimony.

Chaplin Settles $500 Suit Filed by Girl

London, Dec. 1 (AP)—Charlie Chaplin consented today to a judgment with costs for the plaintiff in a suit by Miss May Shepherd, his former press agent, who asked $500 in back wages.

The comedian testified that he had not been aware of the financial arrangements with Miss Shepherd. His lawyer read a statement in which Chaplin said he was settling the case "because great names have been mentioned and I don't want them mentioned further."

5 Firms Cut Tire Prices to New Low

Akron, O., Dec. 1 (AP)—Five large auto tire companies announced price reductions today to the lowest levels in their history. They were the Firestone, B. F. Goodrich, Seiberling, Mohawk and the Master companies.

The reductions, from 5 to 15 per cent, will affect "standard" grades of tires, but not the "second" and "De Luxe" lines. Inner tubes also will be reduced 15 per cent. Similar cuts have been made by the Goodyear and Lee companies.

Mail Flier Is Forced Down; Back by Auto

Denver, Dec. 1 (INS)—Al Cabana, Western Air Express mail pilot, was found today 30 miles north of El Paso, Tex. He left Albuquerque late yesterday, was forced down two hours later and remained with his plane over night. Today in attempting to take off for El Paso he bent a propeller and came here in an auto, while another flier brought in the mail.

Young Mellon Gives Up Literary Leanings to Become Banker

Pittsburgh, Dec. 1 (AP)—Paul Mellon, who once was inclined to follow literary leanings he exhibited at Yale embarked on a banking career today.

The Secretary of the Treasury escorted his son into the Mellon National Bank.

"What are you going to do?" young Mellon was asked.

"I'm going to learn the banking business," he replied.

"In what capacity?"

"Whatever they want me to do."

"What about these earlier reports of your literary ambitions?"

"That's all old stuff and it's all been explained."

'BAT BABY' GAINS 14 POUNDS

Washington, Dec. 1 (INS)—Edith Riley, 13-year-old "cupboard baby," taken from a dark stuffy closet in the home of her father and step-mother three weeks ago, has gained 14 pounds and now weighs 32 pounds, Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent of Gallinger Hospital, reported today.

The under-privileged child is under treatment and observation in the hospital while her parents, Harry and Elsie Riley, are awaiting trial on cruelty charges.

The girl is said to have been kept a prisoner in the Riley home for seven years.

COULD ANYTHING BE MORE THRILLING THAN becoming engaged in one's debutante year? To meet Prince Charming as one steps out of the schoolroom into the ballroom is just like a fairly tale. But that is what is happening to one of this season's pretty debs this afternoon.

BARBARA GREENOUGH

* * *

Barbara Greenough, charming daughter of the Henry Vose Greenoughs of Brookline, is being introduced this afternoon as the fiancee of John S. Bradley of Brookline, formerly of Evanston, Illinois. He is the son of Mrs. Luther Bradley and the late Mr. Bradley. Miss Greenough was formally presented to society this month at a large ball at which she shared honors with her beautiful cousin, Betty McGinley, daughter of Mrs. Holden McGinley of Milton.

* * *

Mr. Bradley is the brother of Francis Bradley, whose engagement to Katherine Howe, daughter of the Dudley Howes of Brookline, was announced last month. He is a graduate of St. Paul's School and Yale University, also the Yale Architectural School, and is now employed by a Boston firm of architects.

* * *

The attractive bride-to-be was elected to the provisional membership of the Junior League and invited to join the Vincent Club this fall.

Attractive Mother and Daughter

ON CHRISTMAS SHOPPING BENT PERHAPS, WE SAW Mrs. Amor Hollingsworth of Hyde Park recently. She is one of our most beautiful matrons with snow-white hair and REAL sables. Her attractive post-debutante daughter, Evelyn, is also one of Boston's best-dressed maidens. We would like to see a mother and daughter fashion show some time, there are so many attractive daughters with equally lovely mothers.

* * *

ALL OF THE YOUNG SET are anticipating Harriet Moseley's ball on Friday night. There will be a small dinner party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick S. Moseley before the dance. The young ladies invited to the dinner include Miss Isobel Henry of Philadelphia, Dorothy Forbes, Marion Clark, Lorna Livermore, Madelyn Phillips, Alice Ellsworth, Serita Bartlett, Anne Dick, Anne Tuckerman, Beatrice de Menocal. Miss Harriet is the younger sister of Miss Helen and Miss Charlotte Moseley.

MRS. LARZ ANDERSON IS extending the sale for the Disabled Ex-Servicemen's Exchange at her home on Commonwealth ave. through today because of the rainy weather yesterday. This sale is dear to the heart of all Bostonians and this year more than ever the gifts made by the soldiers of the late war should be sold for their comfort. Have you ever seen the lovely things made by these boys? We were simply astounded when we ordered various articles last year at the skill and beauty of their handwork. One fluffy haired little girl was thrilled to receive a doll's bassinette, so finely woven of reed and beautifully constructed, it will last for many years, perhaps even handed down to her baby. Do go and see what the soldiers have made that will make your tree more richly laden.

ON WEDNESDAY NIGHT, tomorrow, Jane Bancroft will have her winter party and this means a very large and brilliant ball at the Hotel Somerset. Mrs. William C. Cox (Jessie Bancroft), a sister of the debutante and president of the Vincent Club, will be unable to be present, as she is convalescing from an illness at Phillips House.

MRS. F. DOUGLAS COCHRANE HOSTESS AT LECTURE

First in Series to Benefit Charity

Mrs. F. Douglas Cochrane is opening her house for the first of the series of three lectures to be given for the benefit of the South Boston Neighborhood House, which takes place this afternoon at 3:30. Mr. Philip Handy has chosen the subject for his talk: "Modern Art and the Museums."

Mrs. Chilton R. Cabot, who has charge of the ticket sale for the lectures, has made a most gratifying report to the committee on the response made to the invitations they sent out.

Subscribers

Among those who have subscribed to tickets are Miss Clara A. Adams, Mrs. George R. Aggassiz, Mrs. John S. Ames, Mrs. John W. Bartol, Mrs. Arthur E. Childs, Mrs. Ernest A. Codman, Mrs. F. Benjamin Crowninshield, Mrs. George H. Davenport, Mrs. William Herbert Dewart, Miss Rose L. Dexter, Mrs. George Peabody Gardiner, Miss Mary Hunnewell, Mrs. Ellerton James, Mrs. John Lowell, Mrs. George A. Macomber, Mrs. Donald Munroe, Mrs. Charles A. Proctor, Mrs. Richard M. Saltonstall, Mrs. Gilmore Scranton, Mrs. Willis S. Shepard, Mrs. Joseph G. Thorpe, Mrs. Francis Todd and Albert W. Hunt.

The last named group will attend all three lectures, but there are many who wish to choose only one or two to hear. The other two will be on Tuesday, Dec. 8, on "Notable Gardens of Scotland," by Mrs. John Carroll Perkins, at the home of Mrs. T. Morris Murray, and the last, on the following, Dec. 15, on "Modern Poetry," by Mr. Robert Hillyer, at Mrs. Cochrane's again. The committee is helping to make a substantial amount for the Neighborhood House, especially as they need so much more than usual this year.

Bridge and Tea

Another generous person to open her home for a benefit is Mrs. Phineas W. Sprague, who is hostess at her home this afternoon for a contract game and tea. This will aid the Boston Girl Scouts, for whom a special committee have been working some time.

Mrs. William C. Conant, whose daughter, Miss Edith Conant, is among the highest ranking scouts in the country, is in charge of the tea tables, assisted by the committee including Mrs. Carl T. Keller, Mrs. B. Devereaux Barker, Mrs. Robert M. Burnett, Mrs. William A. Copeland, Mrs. Henry W. Harris, Mrs. Henry G. Lapham, Mrs. Halfdan Lee, Miss Elizabeth C. Marquise's Bad Boys Suffer

New York, Dec. 1 (AP)—The Marquise de Maleissye, otherwise Mrs. Edith Lyman Collins, ward of the late Chauncey M. Depew, who died in France, so deplored the behavior of her two sons that in her will just filed she left them only small bequests and the injunction to "pay their most painful debts."

The marquise was a great granddaughter of the late Commodore Vanderbilt.

The sons, Vladimir and Stanislaus, are to receive $10,000 each. The marquise explains she has left them little because they had "caused me, their mother, to suffer in every possible manner, anguish, worry and veritable misery."

The will directs payment of $5000 to Etienne, Marquis de Maleissye, and adds that the testator hopes "that God will help me to forgive his taking possession of my family collar of pearls."

Church Bells Toll at Blue Law Election

Rochester, N. H., Dec. 1 (AP)—Church bells, tolling for 15 minutes at the opening of polls in the annual city election today, called upon Rochester's church faithful to cast their votes against the proposed liberalization of the Sunday laws.

A local ordinance permitting sports and amusements as well as certain business activities on the Sabbath, recently passed by the city council, was before the voters for ratification.

Just Folks

Beauty

The love of beauty once possessed
  Outlives the sordid dust and grime,
And holds its dwelling in the breast
  Against the ravages of time.

And this is why a woman wan
  And grayed and beaten by defeat,
From day to day will struggle on
  To keep an ugly dwelling neat.

Day after weary day will see
  Her battling with the dirt and dust,
Fighting the filth of poverty
  Because her nobler nature must.

So fond of beauty humans are
  That often in a squalid room
A woman fills with stones a jar
  And brings a lily bulb to bloom.

CONTRACT BIDS TINGE WHIST TOURNEY

Philadelphia, Dec. 1 (AP)—According to the program, they're playing auction bridge the first two days of the national championship tournament this week. So strong a hold has contract taken on the addicts of the card table, however, that the bidding and the play in these events smacks strongly of the newer game.

George Reith and Mrs. Robert Fuller of New York won the national championship of mixed pairs at auction last night but the contract influence tingled even their game. The new champions said they preferred contract.

William E. McKenney of Cleveland, secretary of the American Bridge League, sponsoring the tournament, predicted that auction championships will be dropped after this year.

DECEPTIVE BIDDING.

One instance of how inveterate contract players carried over their habit of deceptive bidding to the auction tables was furnished by Mrs. P. H. Sims of Deal, N. J. She and her husband, one of the foremost bridge exponents of the country, finished ninth in the mixed pairs tournament.

Playing with David Burnstine of New York and Mrs. I. Stengel of Larchmont, N. Y., the following hand appeared:

NORTH

H.—Q, J, X, X, X, X.
D.—J.
C.—A, K, J, 10, X, X.

WEST

S.—K, Q, J, X.
H.—X, X.
D.—X, X, X, X.
C.—Q, X, X.

EAST

S.—X, X.
H.—K, 10, X.
D.—A, 10, X, X, X.
C.—X, X, X.

SOUTH

S.—A, 10, X, X, X, X, X.
H.—A, X.
D.—K, Q, X.
C.—X.

Mr. Burnstine and Mrs. Steng East and West, were silen throughout the bidding. Mr. Sim North, dealt and bid one heart mentioning his major suit first Mrs. Sims changed to one spade Her husband, blank in that suit bid two clubs. Mrs. Sims went to two spades and Mr. Sims bid three clubs.

AUDACIOUS BID

Reluctant to leave the contract at clubs with one worthless car of that suit in her hand, and fearing a diamond lead from Mr. Burnstine, East, against a no trum contract, Mrs. Sims audaciously bi three diamonds to deceive her opponents.

Mr. Sims went on to four club and Mrs. Smith made it fou hearts. Her husband, the original bidder, made a little slam in hearts.

The remaining auction championships were played today, leaving the way clear for the contract competitions starting tomorrow and lasting until Saturday.

GLORIA AND MARQUIS FINALLY PART

◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆ ◆

She Sails on Ship Bearing Farmer, Her No. 4

READERS have seen in Miss Parsons' vivid story of "The Life and Loves of Gloria Swanson" the rise of Gloria Swanson from the obscurity of a screen "extra" to wealth and international fame and a third marriage that secured her a foreign title.

Yesterday we left Miss Swanson and the Marquis Henri de La Falaise at the parting of the ways. In today's chapter, Miss Parsons tells of the "fade-out" of their romance and the relegation of the marquis with Wallace Beery and Herbert Somborn as a former husband of the star. But a new love was to dawn and lead to a secret marriage with Michael Farmer, popular Irish "playboy."

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service, Inc.

(Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Hollywood, Dec. 1—But the Marquis de la Falaise is a gentleman and always will be, come what may. He had no desire to hurt his wife. He wanted his separation and wanted it as quickly as it could be arranged.

He visited Gloria at Malibu, sat on the beach with her and played with the children, Gloria, second, and little Joseph. The children adored him and have always called him "Sunny Jim," and his affection for them has always been one of the things that endeared him to Gloria.

With all the world watching their affairs, on August 5 Gloria and her titled husband issued a joint statement, announcing their decision to part. Gloria, still clutching at a fast fading hope, announced the parting was amicable and although they would occupy different dwelling places they would remain friends.

The bitter humiliation of knowing that Henri was spending his time with Constance Bennett was eating at Gloria's heart. I really believe at this time she would have flung her career and all other romances to the winds to get Henri back. Never had he seemed so necessary to her happiness.

But Gloria is proud. No one saw a tear in her eye. Every night she was seen dancing at the Embassy Club or the Cocoanut Grove, always attended by a group of youths. She was always merry and gay. One night there were seven men at her table at the Embassy and no other women.

Gene Markey, one of her best friends, was frequently seen with Gloria, dining and dancing with her here and there. There were rumors of an engagement, but I don't believe there was ever anything but a good comradeship. Gloria has a wonderful sense of humor when she isn't worried, and this new Gloria was a delightful companion.

Her picture was taken with a young Mr. Ryan at the Mayfair Club and other places, but Gloria, laughingly, said there was no romance. He was merely a friend.

On November 7, 1930, Gloria filed suit for divorce from her marquis. She did her best to keep it out of the newspapers, but the demon press foiled her efforts and the Los Angeles Examiner came out with an exclusive story.

After the divorce there was no longer any reason why Constance Bennett and the Marquise de la Falaise should not appear in public together. Often there were embarrassing situations for Hollywood hostesses who wanted to entertain both Connie and Gloria. But both girls carried off the situation with dignity.

The following June, Gloria, accompanied by Virginia Bowker, a school girl friend from Chicago, sailed for Europe. One reason for the trip was Gloria's eagerness to have little Gloria see Europe. An unusually intelligent child, the trip, her mother decided, would be beneficial and educational as well.

The three of them sailed June 5. Miss Bowker met Michael Farmer, Irish playboy, at one time engaged to Marilyn Miller, musical comedy favorite. Mr. Farmer is reported as having money. No one could ever verify that report. He is young, only 29, he is handsome and he has had some of England's most famous tilted women in love with him.

Whether or not the wealth is a myth no one knows. An older woman relative is supposed to have adopted him. But this is only one of the stories that have been circulated since his marriage to Gloria. At any rate I have seen him and I can vouch for his good looks and for his charm.

TOMORROW: Not only does he find out "whom Miss Swanson is," but he weds her

FRANK HARRIS ON G. B. S., MORE INTERNATIONAL HUMORISTS

By GILBERT SELDES

BERNARD SHAW HAS LIVED seventy-five years, long enough to see himself, the old radical and socialist, appearing as the defender of Mussolini (and simultaneously of Soviet Russia) and long enough, also, to see the radical firebrand, Frank Harris, write of him in precisely the terms old reactionaries used forty years ago. They said that Shaw was unimportant, that he exploited himself deliberately to cause sensations, that he stood himself and the world on his and its heads, to cause comment, that he was a man gifted with wit, but without profound philosophy. And these are the things which, in the midst of a rancorous biography, Frank Harris is saying. Lytton Strachey starting out to mock gently at Queen Victoria, obviously fell in love with his subject; Frank Harris kept himself aloof. I recall few biographies so grudging, so continually displeased, so "always belittlin'."

Desperate Envy

The inner story of Harris' grudge is plainly set down. Harris gave Shaw his first important work to do, his assignment as dramatic critic. And Shaw went up as Harris went down; Shaw prospered, Harris suffered. Harris tells all that, but his frankness does not mitigate his rancor. This would not matter much if Harris, himself, had anything profound to say; he hasn't.

That Shaw is alive, healthy, active and apparently happy, in spite fo the fact that his habits are not those of Frank Harris, drives Harris into a kind of voluptuous frenzy. He presses Shaw for an account of his sexual life, knowing in advance that it will not be like the Life and Loves of Frank Harris, and when Shaw writes it and says that he was continent until the age of 29, Harris goes into a fury. He tries to explain this hideous abnormality (according to the Harris standard) by connecting it with Shaw's vegetarian diet, with his athletic habit, with various complexes; but no explanation explains. He gives up with the cry that if Shaw is normal, then Harris is abnormal.

Easily Shocked

The British newspapers are shocked by the fact that Shaw wrote the letters about his sexual life which appear in this book and then did nothing to prevent their publication, although he had every opportunity, for after the death of Harris, Shaw read the proofs and wrote a friendly and honest estimate of Harris to complete the book. It seems that even to live an exceptional, austere and decent life is no defence against the high sensitivity of parts of the British press.

Ideas and Wit

The days when Shaw was considered a humorist are long past. No one is writing now who can consistently take the leading ideas of the time and treat them with full understanding and full wit, at once. Our humorists, in general, concern themselves with small themes, with personal relations, with social faults. I do not know where you will find a better collection than The New Yorker Scrapbook, which consists of some seventy-five items from the New Yorker, most of them satirical, light and funny. The book begins with Dorothy Parker and ends with Ring Lardner and, quite incidentally, shows why the text of The New Yorker, after all his intelligence and brilliance, does not impress itself as sharply as its drawings. With a single brilliant exception, Mr. E. B. White, the best writers of The New Yorker were all known quantities before the magazine started and they have developed, but not changed; whereas almost all the brilliant draughtsmen who make The New Yorker's pages so precious, are new talent.

Sullivan's Own

Frank Sullivan is one of the upper half dozen in The New Yorker Scrapbook and, at the same time, his own collection has been published under the somewhat anti-whimsy title of Broccoli and Old Lace. Mr. Sullivan's humor has a wild and roving eye, consorting beautifully with a bland, innocent form of expression. He is not at his best when he is writing extravaganza in the comic strip spirit; but when some absurdity of social life seems to him in need of comment, he is suavely mad.

For Men and Women Only

The pictures in The Stag at Eve will probably be identified as rejected addresses, pictures too frank and free for magazine publication. They are extremely funny, not dirty, beautifully executed without a leer or a nasty grin. They provoke laughter without meanness. This isn't exactly common. The purpose of much humor is to make us feel superior; the defect of many of our humorists is that they keep on assuring us of our superiority to the ill-educated and the unfortunate ,to fat women, ignorant foreigners, and people who haven't learned how to use the right fork. (The comic strip is better, in this respect.) The Stag at Eve is not snobbish because it has to do with human beings in the less social of their activities. It can make jokes about bathrooms without making you sick.

Artists at Work

Mr. Soglow is, naturally, the bright star, but, as his qualities are perfectly well known, a word is in order for Steig, who has been for some time creating a series of obnoxious children, endowing them with most of the ill-nature of adults and placing them in attractive situations. Reginald Marsh (who drew last year's superb Angelus and is now receiving applause for his picture in the Whitney Museum) is here with two excellent sardonic sketches, and Gardner Rae, Shermund, Shellhase, Klein and the rest of the good comic strip artists have also sent in some of the "89 pictures for grown-ups."

Take It or Leave It

As I've been writing chiefly about humorous books today, I ought to say that I have never held my sides, rolled off my chair, or otherwise displayed the physical symptoms which, it appears, are the real tribute to humor. At the theater I have laughed until the back of my head hurt; but my sides remained in good condition. I am one of those who can bear humor with equanimity. Perhaps I ought never to mention it.

Arguments End in Cannon Case

Washington, Dec. 1 — Bishop James Cannon, Jr., heard a barrage of legal verbiage directed at an indictment charging him with federal law violation during the 1928 presidential campaign in the District of Columbia Supreme Court yesterday.

Argument will be concluded this afternoon and Justice James Proctor will take the case under advisement.

Report on Senators' Sugar Dealings Near

Washington, Dec. 1—Senator Walsh, Democrat, of Montana, has announced that hearings of the lobby committee on the sugar tariff are closed, and that he would submit to the Senate a report on the transactions attributed to Senators Davis of Pennsylvania and Watson of Indiana.

Walsh said the report would be simply "a sufficient statement of the facts related to the committee."

BOY KILLS GIRL SHOWING HOW ANOTHER DIED

Chicago, Dec. 1 (AP)—A drama of death was enacted by Joseph Wilson, 16-year-old school boy.

He shot to death Constance Trohatos, also 16, in an effort to demonstrate to her just how their schoolmate, Henry Sio, killed Ruth Wicklund, 12, and then himself.

Sio, a 16-year-old schoolboy, shot the Wicklund girl as a result of a childish romance, which the parents of the children had tried to break up before it became too serious.

Constance was killed in the Wilson home, where she and young Wilson and Constance's sister, Cleo, were discussing the Wicklund-Sio tragedy. Sio was a student at the same high school attended by Miss Trohatos and Wilson.

"I'm glad I played hookey," remarked Constance, in referring to the double shooting of their young friends. "Maybe he would have shot me."

"This is loaded with wooden bullets," he said. "See?" he exclaimed as he pressed the pistol against Cleo, and pulled the trigger. It snapped harmlessly. He then walked over to Constance, who was sitting in a chair, put the weapon against her head, and pulled the trigger. Again it snapped without doing any harm. He pressed the trigger again.

There was an explosion, and Constance slumped over in the chair—dead.

149 FAVOR VOTE ON REPEAL

Poll Shows Convention Plan Is Supported by Many in Congress

New York, Dec. 1 (INS)—Returns from a poll of the 531 members of the new Congress today showed at least 149 favored submission of a proposal to repeal the prohibition amendment to conventions in the several states.

The poll was taken by Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, national chairman of the Women's Organization for Prohibition Reform. Responses were received from 251 Senators and Representatives.

Tabulated results showed 49 voted against submission, and 53 were non-committal. Fifteen senators favored putting the question to the states, 15 were against it, and four were non-committal. Of the representatives, 134 were for submission, 34 against and 39 non-committal.

Mrs. Sabin stated the list did not include 66 senators and representatives committed to repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, but who had not yet returned the questionaire.

Those not heard from included Representative Bertrand H. Snell, chosen by Republican Congressmen in Washington as candidate for Speaker, and John Q. Tilson, Connecticut, Snell's rival for the speakership.

Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, Florida, and three others of the five women in Congress, were recorded in favor of submission.

Senator Morris Sheppard, Texas, a sponsor of the prohibition act, opposed putting the question up to state conventions, which would require a two-thirds vote in the Senate and House, and ratification by conventions in 36 state for repeal.

INDIAN PARLEY COLLAPSES

London, Dec. 1 (AP)—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald closed the second round table conference today with a declaration that it had failed, but that arranging of independence for India would go on.

Mahatma Gandhi said that as far as he could determine from listening to the prime minister's address, he and the British government had reached the parting of the ways.

The Mahatma, breaking his day of silence, steadfastly refused compromises proposed by colleagues and said he would return to India to revive the civil disobedience campaign unless the government gives "real liberty" to India's millions of people.

The work of the conference, the prime minister said, would be continued through a committee.

THE VOICE OF Broadway

By Louis Sobol

Down Memory Lane!

(With Tommy Lyman, who was a crooner long before Rudy Vallee first puckered up his lips.)

One of my outstanding memories is going to a party given by the Guggenheims. There I met Maurice and Hughes, who immediately engaged me to appear with them at the Theater Caumartin in Paris.

After I finished the season with them, Jack Dempsey and Jack Kearns got me an engagement in the New York Bar. When I went to work there it was for sale, begging for $9000. When I finished my run, after 20 weeks, it brought $65,000, and just before the crash the proprietors refused $200,000 for it.

Because of my work there, Basil Woon, in his "Paris Not in the Guide Books," said: "The New York Bar was never a success until Tommy Lyman came over and put it on the map with his songs," and "When Tommy sings his ballads he brings tears to the eyes of the tourists and even the French waiters, who understand not a word of English, pull out their handkerchiefs and cry shamelessly when Tommy sings those high melancholy wails that have to do with love."

The first trip I made to Paris on the Aquitania is still vivid in my mind because of the great array of talent and celebrities on board, such as Alma Gluck, Billy Halligan, Joe Benjamin, Teddy Hayes, Jack Dempsey, Jack Kearns, a chap called Schwarz, who won the Grand National that year, and Damon Runyon. I entertained every evening, and at the end of the trip was given $2000 by Dempsey and Kearns.

On my second trip across George Gershwin and I gave a "concert." George did pretty well.

At the New York Bar in Paris, I got a great kick out of entertaining John Charles Thomas, Chauncey Olcott and John McCormack. Afterwards I wrote a song for McCormack called "Mother in Ireland" which he recorded for Victor, and from which I should have made a lot of money——. He still sings it in some of his recitals.

Capt. MacIntosh, who later married one of the Talmadge girls, engaged me to entertain at Mrs. Henry H. Rogers' home in London for a bachelor party in honor of Lord Mountbatten just before he married Lady Mountbatten.

Back in Paris I had the unique pleasure of having the Prince of Wales wait for me for two hours in my club in the Rue Eduard VII, where the Prince had been brought by Miss Audrey Coates to hear me sing. The song the Prince liked best was "The Man I Love."

Later I met Michael Arlen and sang "In Your Green Hat." Michael liked it so well he tried to present me with a cane which I refused, so he sent me a beautiful letter. I still have the letter and value it highly.

Floyd Gibbons was my press agent without pay, when he was the Paris editor of the Chicago Tribune.

Lady Mountbatten and Laddie Sanford, the polo player, boosted me into getting an engagement at the Swanky Florida Club in London where I made a hit, singing nothing but comedy songs. The Club Committee selected all my numbers and didn't allow me to sing any ballads which they called "sloppy songs." Ruby Cowen's "Oogie Oogie Wah Wah" and Solly Violinsky's Jewish parody on the "Wooden Soldiers" along with Ernie Erdman's "We've Got a Boarder" were the biggest songs I did.

Coming back on the Aquitania we struck a storm which lasted about 16 hours. Mabel Boll, the diamond queen, got hysterical and I had to stop her from jumping overboard. I entertained 10 hours at one stretch trying to keep the passengers quiet.

Once back in New York I worked at the Ambassador Hotel and at the Salon Royal at the same time, establishing a record of 70 weeks lone.

It was about this time that I experienced the thrill of being boosted by George Jean Nathan who said, "There are only two song salesmen who stand out head and shoulders above the rest, and they are the illustrious Tommy Lyman and the other, as you have probably already guessed, is the great Dr. Al Jolson."

Maurice Chevalier asked me to come to the Follies Bergere and show him the way I sing and use my hands. Later I had the pleasure of trying to teach Will Rogers how to sing a rube song in one of the Follies. George Olsen and Ann Pennington got a great kick out of the idea of my tutoring the "American Ambassador." Will threw the song out in two weeks, went to Ziegfeld and said, "Flo, that orchestra has got to play for me. I can't sing with them."

There was the time I took "Blue Heaven" off the shelf where it lay for three years, and by singing it and plugging it over the radio constantly for eight months, made $80,000 for the writers and not a quarter for myself. I also took another song called "In the Middle of the Night," by Billy Rose and Walter Donaldson and made a hit of it. The same thing happened to "Melancholy Baby" when I brought it to New York.

"Carrying the torch" was an expression I created when I wrote the first "torch song" called, "Gee, But It's Tough When the Gang's Gone Home." Damon Runyon calls it the "torch carriers' anthem."

At a party for Bertrand Taylor who was supposed to marry Gertie Lawrence I met a chap who talked like an Oxford graduate and who turned out to be Prince George of Greece. Which reminds me that it was at another party, this time for Fred Cruger, that I heard two girls doing what I thought was a very good imitation of the Duncan Sisters. The two girls were Gertie Lawrence and Bee Lillie.

After my opening in London, Fred and Adele Astaire gave me a lovely good cigarette case with their names engraved inside. I also got a gold match case from Fred Gimbel while in London and a beautiful tie from O. O. McIntyre when I was in Paris.

I still boast about the time that Jack Whitney showed me around London.

And about the distinction that came to me for being the first entertainer to get into the pages of the Cosmopolitan in a story by O. O. McIntyre.

Will Rogers came to my place in Paris to have a few high beers and boiled eggs, of which he is very fond. He made it one big night by entertaining the guests and telling them that it was the first time that he had ever visited a night club.

Al Jolson also gave the Americans and Frenchmen a great treat by taking off his collar and singing all night in my place. I met Jolson a year later on Broadway and he told me that while playing Boston, a man approached him and said, "Hello, Mr. Jolson, don't you remember me? I came to hear you sing in Paris many times when you worked for Tommy Lyman."

I remember the time I wrote "Montmartre Rose" for Fanny ......I remember the time I wrote "Montmartre Rose" for Fanny Brice for a show called "Laughing Lena," which Flo Ziegfeld was going to produce, but which never happened because he changed the writers of the book too often. Ziegfeld also signed me up for the same show and bought the production rights of "Montmartre Rose" and two other songs that I had written. I consider it one of the lost opportunities of my career when that show failed to open.

Ziegfeld later took me to Palm Beach where I enjoyed singing hot songs to Heifetz, the violinist, and torch songs to Irving Berlin.

ETHEL BARRYMORE IN MASTERLY PERFORMANCE

'The School for Scandal' Wins Praise at Gala Plymouth Premiere

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

A century and a half of existence has given Sheridan's "The School For Scandal" many illustrious, even talented, Lady Teazles. It has remained for Ethel Barrymore, however, to invest that adorable Georgian coquette with new tones, more brilliant coloring and a generally smarter appearance than any of our most adventurous in the role. Miss Barrymore faced a friendly audience at the Plymouth last evening. She won it completely by her own gentle graces and the added blessing of costumes that would make even the dullest and most unobserving eye blink with wonderment.

* * *

Ethel Barrymore

It is hardly fair to say that Miss Barrymore surrendered her art to her dressmaker, but it was plain to all observers that here, at least, was a Lady Teazle who knew her modiste—and encouraged her. Miss Barrymore was the best caparisoned Lady Teazle this town had ever laid wondering eyes upon. But it was no fashion show, it was an excellent performance, well done and graciously received. Miss Barrymore did thrill her audience; she intrigued it with the arts she so well has in hand on important occasions. She was the comedienne again, not a Scarlet Sister Mary in Blackface. It is reported that Miss Barrymore made many re-arrangements—if you can call them that—in this acting version. Let's call it a masterly job.

* * *

Whatever there is in "The School For Scandal" that calls for safe and sane acting falls upon Lady Teazle. Without its soliloquies; without some of its uselessness in dialogue, and redressed to fit these dour days, the comedy would be the season's rage. Probably it would not take a Pulitzer prize, but that omission would save it from peaceful oblivion.

* * *

With ample theatrical history behind it and, of course, somewhat dimmed with respected age, "The School For Scandal," as Miss Barrymore presents it, makes better fare for those who are drama hungry than scores of experiments entered upon by the learned tycoons of the Broadway theater. It is a Barrymore show, to use a hard word so flippantly tossed about in these hard days of a bewildered drama. Because it is exactly that, it will catch the ear of the indifferent and will hold the attention of those who are seeking better wares in the playhouses.

* * *

At first glance, Miss Barrymore's Lady Teazle, at least to the ladies, might seem like something of a demonstration in staggering habiliment. For a moment, but only for a moment, Miss Barrymore's costumes arrested attention. Then the artist laid deft hands upon the performance, became the master of situation—in plain fact, kept the comedy running at rather fancy speed.

* * *

To Miss Barrymore's credit it may be said that, by her own arrangement, her support has been not only congenial but adequate. There was cool assurance in the Joseph Surface of McKay Morris; the Sir Peter Teazle of Charles Croker-King was authoritative, if voluble, and the Sir Oliver Surface of Harry Plimmer displayed artistry of quality. Walter Gilbert, always a local favorite by reason of season upon season in stock companies around these parts, was adequate and was promptly acknowledged by loyal and exuberant disciples.

* * *

"The School For Scandal," viewed broadly, is more a triumph for Miss Barrymore than for Mr. Sheridan. Given a more narrow aspect, it was a triumph for the modiste.

Lillian Dixon Howard Star

At the Old Howard this week is a burlesque traveling show that stars Lillian Dixon, who is hailed as the "queen of brunettes." The company is the "Big Revue." The comedy is placed in the hands of George Murray, Bob Startzmann and Charley Cole. Other members include Dorothy Kelley, Ethel DuBoise, Jane Gordon, Harry Beasley and Vincent Scanion. Buddie Nichols is a peppery principal.

In addition the Howard has an entertaining vaudeville and picture bill. The Young China Troupe and Shapiro and O'Malley are on stage. The pictures offer the Floyd Gibbons Series, "Turn of the Tide." Eddie Quillan in "Sweepstakes," and "Eyes of the World."

The midnight performance comes on Friday.

INTO EYES OF LOVE

Old Favorites at Scollay

Two of old-time favorites, Lewis and Dody, originators of "Hello, Hello, Hello," are the outstanding act of this week's bill at the Scollay. These veterans offer a brand of humor that is so fast the audience drowns out a part of it by laughing so much.

The Sweet and Hot Revue has four feature dancers who are far above average in both skill and looks. The young man who acts as master of ceremonies for these girls does a superb job. Wilton Crawley, colored clarinetist, not only is a master with his chosen instrument, but he was able to stop the show with his pantomime. Kathleen (Red) Dexter and Company appear in a splendid sketch called "Going Places."

Donia and White in "A Word of Advice" provide an amusing bit of Italian comedy. Lillian Morton appears in the role of a hard boiled girl who mistakes a garbage man for her expected "date," thereby having her little romance spoiled. Blue, Roth and Stone are in "Just Three Rolling Stones."

"The Mystery of Life" at Fine Arts Is Highly Instructive

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

"The Mystery of Life," at the Fine Arts, is a sound screen exposition of the theory of evolution. That is the simple statement of its theme, appealing mostly to the student. But its makers have gone further afield, fashioning a group of sequences which sometimes show a dramatic appeal which human actors fail to put across from the silver sheet. Thus this instructive film absorbs one's interest. Never dull, it is often fascinating, sometimes amusing, and always entertaining.

Clarence Darrow

From the start it is evident that expert hands all along the line attended to the making of "The Mystery of Life." There is at the start, as a sort of prologue, an explanatory discussion, nicely done and in terms easily understood by anyone. Scientific matters are made clear by Atty. Clarence Darrow as he talks with Prof. H. M. Parshley, head of the department of zoology at Smith College. The camera leaves, to explore the world of nature; occasionally, the lens returns to the two speakers to hold them in the picture and to bring out further talk on evolution.

Through the eyes of the microphone the screen delves into the careers of the lowest forms of living things; and gradually the theme is unfolded, rising up the scale to man. One gets a close-up of the habits of animals, methods of propagation.

"The Mystery of Life," though out of the common run of film features, has entertainment value that makes it worthwhile.

Globe Trotter

For the first time since his dethronement in 1918, the former Kaiser Wilhelm II has posed for motion pictures. He was the last of the great personalities of the world to bow to the lure of the camera. Brief glimpses of the former Kaiser have been secured in the past, but this is the first time that he permitted the cameramen to invade the seclusion of the grounds of his castle at Doorn. These remarkable pictures are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, now at Loew's State, with an accompanying description of the great achievement by the Globe Trotter.

The former Kaiser refuses to talk, but complies with all other requests. Wilhelm is dressed as any country squire would be, and his 73 years add to his regal bearing. Except that his hair is white, as is the beard that he has grown during the 13 years of his exile, there is little change in his appearance.

The greatest rum seizure of the year is shown as prohibition agents capture a $500,000 cargo of smuggled Christmas cheer on the oil tanker Raritan Sun.

The first elimination boxing matches for places on the U. S. team that will compete in the Olympic games are pictured as they took place in Madison Square Garden.

Chester Morris to Star in 'The Miracle Man' for Paramount

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
(Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Hollywood, Dec. 1—Friends of Chester Morris know he has been chafing at the bit ever since the production of "Corsair" was finished. He and Roland West, the man who first brought him screen fame, after "Corsair" were not the buddies they had been before this certain film went into production. Something happened that irked Mr. Morris and made him feel that he was unfairly treated.

Louella O. Parsons

One reason given is that although he was the star of the picture, Thelma Todd (Alison Lloyd), got most of the breaks. Therefore, it didn't surprise Hollywood when Mr. Morris sought his freedom, in other words, when he bought his contract from Mr. West.

Chester is now under contract to Paramount. He will do "The Miracle Man" for them and a series of pictures, and while he isn't continuously under contract, he will be on call at certain times.

Meanwhile, Alison Lloyd goes back to the name of Thelma Todd. Although "Corsair" is said to have helped Miss Todd in her screen advancement, changing her name didn't do her an ounce of good professionally.

A few Hollywood flashes of interest are the congratulations Oscar, famous Paramount bootblack, is receiving on the arrival of an eight-pound girl. Ann Harding and company left for Florida Friday night. Perc Westmore, Hollywood's favorite make-up artist, has invented gold eyelashes to wear with formal evening gowns. June Dollyer can be seen almost any pleasant day doing her own marketing. Charles Rogers has asked all male employes on the Pathe lot to bring clothing they no longer wear to send to the Home for Disabled Veterans. He has ordered a five-ton truck to deliver the clothing. Mary Boland and Charles Ruggles are to be teamed in her first Paramount picture. Prepare to laugh, it even sounds funny.

The Clark Gables are due back from their motor trip. He has been taking a vacation to get himself in readiness for his next picture, and he certainly deserved a vacation, for he has worked steadily without rest. There is a rumor that "The Bugle Call," which was to have been a Lon Chaney special a long time ago, is to be revised with Clark Gable and Wallace Beery in the leading roles. However, this may be just one of those tales that are peddled around, and we hear plenty. One story I know is true is that "The Lost Squadron" goes into production this morning after being rewritten. The same cast, Richard Dix, Mary Astor, Joel McCrea, Eric Von Stroheim, Robert Armstrong, Dorothy Jordan and Hugh Herbert report for work, and a very good cast, I should say.

The last time I saw Robert Ames was at luncheon in the Embassy Club. He and Ina Claire had just been to the funeral of Robert Williams and Bobby Ames was terribly shaken over the death of his friend. He could talk of nothing else and seemed terribly depressed. Speaking about this someone said "How strange that the two leading men in 'Rebound' should have both died so close together." The death of a screen player always hits Hollywood hard and Bobby Ames' tragic end has been a particularly bitter blow.

TALENTED

Miss Elizabeth Cushman, Newton soprano, who will give a recital in Jordan Hall, on Tuesday evening, Dec. 15.

Mary Wigman to Dance

Mary Wigman, celebrated German dancer, will appear in Symphony Hall next Thursday evening. She will dance to the crash and cadences of primitive instruments and simple melodic strains on the piano. The collection of instruments to which she dances is a curious one, consisting of five Chinese gongs, two gamelan gongs from Burma, four modern jazz drums, one set of Indian bells, one Negro drum, one pair of cymbals and one huge hand drum. They are played by her two assistants—Miss Gretl Curth, a young girl from her Hamburg school, and Hanns Hasting, who composed the simple music for the dances. One would expect savage and incoherent sounds from these strange instruments. But this is not so.

LISTENERS' LAMENT

It isn't any secret that those directing doings on our dials have heard rumblings about listener interest waning. Followers of many first class studio programs very often grow weary of excessive ballyho and superlative praise. Apparently it has been found necessary to do something. By paying strict attention, one denotes an increase of entertainment time occupying more than a few favorite offerings lately.

Makers of this food product, that cosmetic and the other beverage, candy, cigars, cigarettes or what will you have, are falling in line with wise business counsel made available by broadcasting station program heads. More sponsors might well follow the lead of a few pioneers.

If only the good work keeps up. There is yet a long way to go before what may be justly termed an ideal program is staged for our patient American air audience.

IDAHO HONORED

Followers intrigued by the "Parade of States" (WEEI) last night at 9:30, learned a lot about Idaho they didn't glean in schoolrooms.

Again WBZ training is rewarded with Alden Edkins' Northeastern Division Audition triumph. Microphone men step up steadily from that station. John McNamara may be the next—eh?

Look for thrills aplenty when Floyd Gibbons soon tells what he sees there in the troubled Manchurian area.

OLD STANDBYS

Repeated radio efforts to land Al Jolson for some of his mammy b's don't seem to mean anything. Al may yet be brought into the fold somehow.

What radio sport commentator used a well-known Boston sporting writer's dandy piece about the Sheehan benefit, reading the bit over air channels Sunday night, without giving due credit to the newspaper man?

* * *

Now a rumor finally "leaks" out that Joe Rines and John Clark were after publicity when they staged their little tiff about singing "This Is the Missus" through WBZ. Maybe so, but, strange as it may seem, John Clark has been known to actually back away from publicity far better for him than this stunt, if that's what it was.

BRICKBATZ AND BOKAYS

Unless an announcer can register laughter in a manner that suggests instant laughter on the receiving end, he would or might win his way quicker by abandoning attempts . . . Phil Cook (WBZ nightly) gets off some mighty smart repartee, and it's original seven times out of ten or better . . . An Arlington patron of this "colyum" suggests radio entertainers are born, not made ! . . . Let's not argue . . . Bill Munday says he's had enough broadcasting, and announces his radio retirement . . . Roger Vinton Snow, well known attorney of Portland, Maine, won the State Song contest just concluded down that way . . . We'll be hearing his musical compositions shortly no doubt . . . Betty Cole going slick through WNAC with her blues voice lately . . . New programs keep popping into the air overnight . . . Takes a lot of ear cupping to keep track of recognized top notchers . . . Not so many stars come out of the shuffle . . . Just keep listenin', as Tony Wons would have it . . . He's one they'd have a hard job replacing if they wanted to.

2 MEN SOUGHT AS SLAYERS OF STARR

Faithfull, stepfather and mother of the dead girl.

During this visit, Mrs. Faithfull made the startling statement to friends that Starr's death followed shortly after attempts were made to extort money from a prominent Bostonian, whose name was linked with the girl's.

These attempts were made, it was understood, by members of the Boston underworld, who are now being sought for questioning in connection with the death of the mystery girl.

Mrs. Faithfull further revealed she and her husband had again sought an interview with the Boston man, despite the fact they were reported to have collected $20,000 from him because of his experiences with their daughter.

Although this interview was refused, it was learned the Faithfulls are no longer pressed for funds, having taken a house at 141 Nixon ave., Tompkinsville, in the exclusive residential section of Staten Island, N. Y. Only recently they moved from their small apartment in Greenwich Village, N. Y.

GIRL WAS STRUCK

The Boston visit was made for the purpose of interviewing Atty. Charles F. Rowley of 70 State st., who appeared for the family at the time the $20,000 was collected. Atty. Rowley was asked to testify in New York legal proceedings Stanley Faithfull has instituted, but refused.

The Faithfulls came here three weeks ago, staying with friends in Newton several days. During that time Mrs. Faithfull renewed acquaintanceship with a woman who had been a schoolmate of hers.

In conversation with this woman the Evening American learned she said her daughter's death closely followed the making of financial demands on the prominent Bostonian, by Boston men. These men she was quoted as saying, had learned the Boston man had paid money to the Faithfulls and were using the knowledge for extortion purposes.

The authorities, it is understood, learned that the extortioners were successful the first time in obtaining money, but were refused on returning for more, on the ground they had no evidence. The Boston men, it was disclosed, then went to New York to secure from Starr Faithfull concrete evidence with which to back up their demands.

They established a contact with the exotic beauty, it was revealed in the new evidence and were seen with her in the Grand Central station in New York city on Friday, the day she disappeared.

Later that night the girl and the two Boston men were reported together in a Long Beach, L. I., cafe, which has since been closed through the efforts of citizens' organizations.

At this time, according to the new evidence, the Boston men demanded certain evidence from Starr regarding the payments reported made by the Boston man. She refused, according to the new information, and an argument ensued during which she was struck by one of the men.

The girl, who had been drinking heavily, and was also said to have been taking veronal, became unconscious, the latest evidence discloses. The Boston men, believing her dead and being frightened, are accused of taking the body to the beach and throwing it into the water. They then made their escape and the sea revealed the crime the following Monday, when the bruised body of the girl of mystery was washed ashore.

SECOND REQUEST

It was in pursuance of this evidence, the Evening American learned, that Asst. Dist.-Atty. Litteton and Detective Mayforth came to Boston last week. They were armed with descriptions of the two Boston men reported to have been seen with Starr, and which are understood to have been turned over to private detectives. They also carried an anonymous letter naming two local "big shot" racketeers as possibly having knowledge of the death of the former Boston beauty. It is understood the racketeers were eliminated.

In connection with their investigation, which lasted several days jured to such an extent that she became willful and reckless in New York.

In 1926, according to her story, the former Boston beauty's mental condition was such that her family believed she should be given professional care. For this reason, Mrs. Faithfull explained, the Boston man was asked to contribute a sum of money on the ground that he was primarily responsible for Starr's moral breakdown. Atty. Rowley, acting for the Faithfull family, procured the payment of $20,000, for which a release from all future claims was given.

Notwithstanding this release, Mrs. Faithfull admitted that another interview was sought with the prominent Bostonian early last spring. She said she and her husband realized they had no further legal claim on this man, but because of Starr's condition felt they still had a moral claim.

Secure in his possession of the release, the Boston man failed to admit the justice of the second claim, she said, and denied their request, understood to have been for $5000. Later, however, he was said to have come to their rescue and, through a relative, to have saved for Mrs. Faithfull certain Massachusetts property, the mortgage on which was to have been foreclosed.

No doubt he now believed himself finished with the Faithfulls, but it was only a short time later, in April, according to the new evidence, that the underworld took a hand in the proceedings.

The prominent Bostonian was visited by two men from an entirely different social strata in this city. They informed him they knew of his payments of money to the Faithfulls, and why they were made. The men stated that much as it might grieve them, they feared the story would have to be given to the public.

Their host saw the point, and settled with his visitors for a comparatively large sum, it was rethe Long Island officials talked with the prominent Bostonian whose name had been associated with that of Starr Faithfull.

They returned to Long Island without making known the results of their visit, but it was understood to have been fruitful.

Mrs. Faithfull, in her conversation with her schoolgirl friend, told the whole story of Starr's experiences with the prominent Bostonian, the Evening American learned.

She is quoted as saying that, as a result of the girl's contact with this man, her moral fibre was inported to the New York authorities. They were not satisfied however, and in a short time returned with new demands.

On this occasion, it was learned, the men were curtly informed they had no evidence and were not going to receive any more money. Then followed their visit to New York which ended in a stark tragedy for the thrill-seeking Starr Faithfull and sent the two Boston men scurrying to cover.

GANGLEADER, 37 OTHERS SEIZED ON TUGBOAT

New York, Dec. 1 (AP)—Vannie Higgins, ranked by police as one of New York's most notorious gangsters, was seized early today with 38 companions on a tug off Staten Island.

Although no liquor was found, the vessel, identified as the former British mine-layer Steadfast, had no ship's papers aboard, coast guardsmen said. All the men were taken into custody.

One of the prisoners escaped while they were being escorted to the barge office for questioning and a heavy guard was immediately placed around the remaining 38.

Higgins has been in the limelight as a close associate of Jack "Legs" Diamond and other gang leaders. One of the men seized on the tug police said they believed to be John T. Dalton, a former chauffeur of Diamond.

DEAN GRID STAR DIES IN CRASH

Franklin, Dec 1 (INS)—Wayne Brooks, center on this year's Dean Academy football eleven and a senior at the academy, was killed in an automobile accident in Waterford, Ct., according to word received here today.

Reports received here said Brooks was driving to school accompanied by a girl student and sister of one of his classmates, when his automobile was in collision with a truck.

Brooks, well known throughout the East, died in Waterford Hospital.

PARKING PLAN POSTPONED 2 MONTHS

have been at loggerheads over the traffic conditions.

"The present system of changing the rules every few weeks leads to confusion among the police," said Commissioner Hultman after suggesting that new rules in the future be tried out by police before adoption.

"Under some of the present rules, police are required to stand on a corner, wait for a car to be parked, check the overtime and then wait to identify the driver," he added.

Commissioner Conry asked to be heard immediately after.

"There is a flow of complaints from Beacon Hill that cars are parked at night there. Their owners return at about 1 a. m., in a very hilarious mood. They slam doors of cars and blow horns," he retaliated.

AFRAID TO PARK HERE

Mayor Curley, presiding, smoothed the situation with the smiling remark, "Where do you suppose they go?"

Curley asked that all present study the parking problems and meet about the middle of January so that a full solution may be made by Feb. 1.

"The impression is growing outside of Boston that this city is unsafe to park in," Curley said.

"Residents of outside towns read of tagging and are afraid to come here to park.

"The culmination of all was the court decision that the police must tag the operator instead of the machine.

NO WORTHWHILE PLAN

"That decision scrapped practically every rule and regulation governing traffic in this city. We can't run the city that way.

"It would appear that there is sufficient intelligence in Boston to solve this problem.

"Up to the present, so far as I can see, the Retail Trade Board or no other organization has developed any worthwhile plan."

He then suggested postponement.

"I think we should hold up all action until Febuary 1 so the stores can get their Christmas shopping and January sales out of the way," he said.

PROMISES AID

President Snyder cited the owner-responsibility rule as a "distinct contribution toward solving the problem."

He promised whole-hearted study of the problem by his organization between now and the middle of January.

SANTA FLOODING MAILS

Home Town in New Postal Record

Santa Claus, Ind., Dec. 1 (AP)—The little fourth class postoffice in this town, five miles from a railroad station, is making plans for the greatest Christmas rush in its history.

Heretofore letters addressed by children to the patron saint of Christmas which found their way here have been the greatest problem of the postoffice staff, but this year outgoing mail will cause unprecedented congestion.

Direct-by-mail advertisers and firms that mail Christmas cards and gifts for clients have notified the Postoffice Department at Washington they plan extensive mailing from here this year, so the letters and packages will be postmarked "Santa Claus."

As a result, two special mailing machines capable of postmarking 40,000 letters per hour are being shipped here, and special clerks familiar with their operation will swell the postoffice staff.

How One Woman Lost 47 Lbs of Fat

In 3 Months and Feels Years Younger

"I have been taking Kruschen Salts for nearly 3 months. I have continued taking one teaspoonful in warm water every morning. I then weighed 217 pounds, was always bothered with pains in my back and lower part of abdomen and sides.

"Now I am glad to say I am a well woman, feel much stronger, years younger and my weight is 170 pounds. I do not only feel better but I look better, so all my friends say."

A bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts 4 weeks costs but 85 cents at druggists the world over. Take one half teaspoon in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast.

Attention to diet will help—cut out pastry and fatty meats—go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar—the Kruschen way is the safe way to lose fat. Try one bottle and if not joyfully satisfied—money back.

THIS IS LIFE

OUR 'DEADLY' SENSE OF HUMOR FROM FRANKLIN TO LOWELL THOMAS

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

HAS AMERICA REALLY evolved in her national history a kind of humor which is not only incomprehensible to Europeans but actually distasteful? A recent writer in the Vossische Zeitung of Berlin, quoted in this week's Literary Digest, seems to think so. It is rather hard to tell what the writer, a woman, objects to most, whether it is our national habit of telling only the beginning and the climax of a funny story and leaving the listener to fill in for himself, or whether it is our queer way of finding matter for humor in battle, murder and sudden death, violence in its various forms, mayhem and death. She quotes from our laconic newspaper jokes which are reprinted from paper to paper and wander all over the United States in the most inconsequent fashion; she describes our comic strips that end so often with a "pow" or "zowie" and our comic "shorts" in the films, especially, one suspects, the utterly preposterous animated cartoons like "Mickie Mouse" which our Americans adore but which Berlin audiences never laugh at.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

No "Deadly" Sense of Humor

They keep solemn, explains the writer, first because they cannot understand the jokes, so much is left out, and, secondly, they wouldn't laugh anyway even if they did understand them, because it is not the German habit to laugh at pictures treating sickness, injury and death as comic material.

This foreign obtuseness to American humor is not new in history. Mark Twain ran up against it once or twice, as when he insisted on dropping a tear at the grave of Adam. But our first of a long line of American humorists who delighted in pulling the foreigner's leg was no other than Benjamin Franklin in his celebrated letter to an English friend on the natural wealth of America.

The English, it seems, had been insisting that the colonies could well afford to pay heavy taxes because of our natural resources. So Benjamin solemnly carries out the joke by describing our sheep, with tails so fat that they have to drag a trailer behind them, and our seas, so thick with fish that they shoulder one another out of the water. The climax of the letter is his description of the whales chasing the salmon up our tidal rivers and the attempts of the salmon to escape up the rapids. And the grandest natural sight in America, adds Franklin, is the grand leap of the whale after the salmon up Niagara Falls!

There, I take it, is the beginning of American humor, out of which Mark Twain and Artemus Ward, the Katzenjammer Kids, Laurel and Hardy, Mickey Mouse and all the other examples to which the German lady objects so ponderously.

Where Whoppers Pour in

All these are recalled to me while thumbing over the little book that Lowell Thomas has just published entitled "Tall Stories" and subtitled "The Rise and Triumph of the Great American Whopper" (Funk & Wagnall), a book that every man will really appreciate. It's not a big book, but oh, my! The selections in it are: "The Great American Whopper," "A Fisherman Went Fishing," "Mighty Hunters Before the Lord," "A Wonderful Bird Is the Mosquito," "Great Snakes," "Speaking of the Weather," and "The Home of the Brave."

The genesis of the book is interesting. In a broadcast on mosquito extermination he mentioned the Jersey varieties and received some "tall" mosquito stories. He told one of them publicly and received a flood, from all parts of the country; also stories about fish, snakes, animals and varmints of various sorts, weather, and what have you. Occasionally he stimulated them by telling one on the air. Presently there was an informal Tall Story Club, membership in which could be obtained only by sending a whopper. He noticed that every story came in from all parts of the country and in innumerable forms, all the details different, only the main theme holding them together. Some of them were obviously backwoods wheezes on the old themes of Baron Munchausen, such as the stag with cherry-tree antlers, the frozen post-horn, and steeple-high snow storm. Some were based on the marvelous adventures of Paul Bunyan and his gang. Some were traditional fishing camp and hunting lodge stories dressed up. A few were new.

Mr. Thomas gives the best version of each, as many of the alternative versions as seem to have interesting features, and usually winds up with a reminiscence of something of a similar nature that happened to him in the Sahara desert or on an Arctic expedition.

They are all old favorites. There is the story of the fish that after a drink of moonshine attacked the big sea bass. The town that lit its main thoroughfare with lightning bugs. The dogfish, that chased the rabbit. The fog that was so thick it floated a boat and you could catch fish in it. The fish that learned to follow his master down the road like a dog, but fell into a puddle and was drowned. (Don Marquis once printed a nice version of that one).

What Would Germany Think?

The gold fish that used to take a line and go out to catch a string of pickerel for his master. The hunter who killed the geese, the deer, the ducks and the quail at one shot. The maple sugar lake. The buck that turned round so quickly on being shot that the bullet came right back and hit the man in the shoulder. The hunting dog that wig-wagged signals to his master. The wagon wheel that died of snake-bite. The cold spell that froze a bonfire, which thawed out next spring and set fire to the woodshed. And the horse that lay down in the snow, thinking it a cotton field, and froze to death.

I'd like to try this book of Lowell Thomas' on the German lady and her public. It would make them think we Americans are even crazier than we appear to be under the present administration. For all of them are, without question, in the great American tradition of the Jumping Frog and the Chamois hunt in the Swiss bedroom. They are all motivated by a genuine love of nature and the great out-of-doors. They show, one and all, an intense love of nature and all her works, with an idealistic desire to improve on nature where she has been found wanting.

They exhibit a belief in the altruistic character of our feathered and finny and scaly friends which has been fostered in several generations of children by the S. P. C. A. and "Our Dumb Animals." Except that the animals in this book aren't so dumb!

If any of the readers of this column are amateur fishermen or sportsmen or just amateur raconteurs whose stock of stories is running low, Lowell Thomas' "Tall Stories" is the book for you. You will find all your favorite stories retold in all their possible versions—and many that are hardly possible. There will be stories you never heard of before. In fact, you never need tell the truth again!

The Goodfellows are rallying for the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund—but how, this year, can there be too many Goodfellows?

There can't be, and everyone who can lend a helping hand to the unfortunate and the needy in this Christmas time of 1931 will be welcomed.

There are more hungry this year than ever before, there are more who need clothing, more who need every necessity, but who haven't even the barest essentials for life and comfort.

In this connection the Christmas Basket Fund Editor appeals today particularly to housewives for articles of clothing that are useless to the members of their families—shoes and garments outgrown by their own children, men's suits that perhaps have been discarded by husbands, brothers or sons, but that would be welcomed by men who are actually in need.

ANYTHING WILL HELP

And women's clothing that may be hanging in closets, seen every day taking up space but never used.

Dig around in your closets, in that storeroom in the attic, and downstairs in the trunks and chests. Blankets are very acceptable, comforters—anything you cannot use yourself. A good use can be found for every article.

The Christmas Basket Fund Editor started on such a house cleaning himself yesterday and was amazed to discover all the articles of clothing that he no longer could use in his household—children's shoes, dresses, underwear and coats, men's shoes and shirts—a variety of articles.

You probably will find the same condition in your own home. Dig around you Goodfellows.

No representative list of American stage or screen luminaries is complete without a Barrymore. So another name has been added to the galaxy of stars who will appear at the Boston Garden for the Boston Evening American's Christmas Basket benefit show next Monday night.

Miss Ethel Barrymore arrived in Boston yesterday to begin an engagement at the Plymouth Theater in the "School For Scandal." She didn't know it was loaded. Mayor Curley's reply was that the proposal was "outrageous."

"It was only a suggestion on my part," said Mrs. Tillinghast. "I simply wanted to know if Boston was doing the same as in New York.

"I called up Mr. Shields of the municipal employment bureau in a friendly spirit to make a friendly inquiry and I supposed they would take it that way. I was surprised when they rushed into print with my request."

She said that the idea came to her originally from Field Supt. Wickson, an immigration bureau official in Washington.

Ken Gives Lily Lou First Kiss

HOW THE STORY STARTED

Lily Lou Lansin, youngest of a large family, all of whom have sacrificed to give her singing lessons, comes to live in Oakland. She boards with her married sister, May and her husband Raymond and works in an office in San Francisco. After leaving the ferryboat one morning she meets Ken Sargent, whom she used to know in Wood Lake, where his family had a summer cottage. She becomes interested in the son of a millionaire shipowner and her sister May becomes furious. Lily Lou accepts an invitation to ride with Ken.

"Oh quanti occhi fisi . . ." The haunting melody from "Butterfly."

"Aren't you taking it too fast? May inquired from her couch.

"No!" Lily Lou began again. "Oh quanti . . ." Broke off . . . "Oh! That's the telephone. I'll answer!"

But Lily Lou got there first.

"Hello!" It was her singing voice, melting, honey-sweet.

Raymond looked at May and May looked at Raymond [illegible] everything of her [illegible] a show horse! She got tired too . . . she might want [illegible] want something different [illegible]

"You're sure you can get away . . . Well, it would be fun. Still, it's late . . . well, just for a little ride . . . In five minutes. Are you sure you know the house? I'll be ready!"

Lily Lou hung up the receiver. Two bright spots burned in her cheeks [illegible] looked right through May [illegible] obviously [illegible] at all.

IRE AROUSED

"For heaven's sake, who was that?"

Lily Lou came back to earth. "Ken Sargent." Her voice sounded a trifle belligerent. She moved toward the door.

"Ken Sargent . . . KEN SARGENT! Lily Lou Lansing, not that Sargent that used to come up to the lake years ago?"

A nod from Lily Lou.

"Ken Sargent! Where did he come from?"

"Met him on the boat."

"Humph. It's a wonder he'd speak."

"Why is it a wonder he'd speak?"

"Oh, don't be silly. If you've forgotten how the Sargents treated us, I haven't. Poor white trash, that's what they thought we were! Snobs! I'll never forgive that woman—"

Silence.

She got half way down the hall.

"Lily Lou! Did you say tonight? NOW?"

"Yes."

"But you can't! Tonight's the night Laura comes after her choir rehearsal. She'll be here any minute."

"I know. You entertain her."

WASTING MONEY

"Entertain her?" May snorted. She dragged herself from her couch, shuffled out to the hall. "I entertain her, when she comes to play accompaniments for you for 50 cents? You must be crazy!"

JUDGE LOWELL URGES LAWYERS TO 'SMILE-A-WHILE' IN COURT

ALL PRISONERS ENTITLED TO A 'SQUARE DEAL'

Seven Women and 104 Men Are Admitted to Practice Before Federal Bar

Square deals for clients and "a smile in court once in a while," were suggested to seven women and 104 men today by Judge Lowell as he welcomed the group as new attorneys before the United States bar.

The new group, many of them eligible to state practice for some years, were admitted to practice in federal courts

"You hear a great deal about criminals, riots in prisons and so forth," said Judge Lowell. "The reason for these prison riots is overcrowding. The men think they have not receiver a sqquare deal.

URGES SQUARE DEAL

"The criminal wants to get off when he comes to court. If he doesn't get off he wants to be given a square deal. He wants fair treatment. That's what the courts are for.

Swampscott's on the Water Wagon These Days and Not a Drop to Drink

BUSY WATER CARRIER

The Foster Dam district of Swampscott is seeing a lot of water wagons. The trouble with these wagons, however, is rusty interiors. Two artesian wells, supplying more than 300 persons, were condemned Saturday and wagons used. Fred Marino, Tony Dilisio, Daniel J. Gannon and Louis Delano manned the wagons.

THE FROZEN PIPE LINE

William L. Gould of Windsor st points to the break in the pipe line which is the cause of all Swampscott water troubles. The pipe froze up and cracked recently.

MANY IN NEED OF CLOTHES

Everett, 11 years old, who is crippled by spinal meningitis and who pleaded for a wheel chair that she might go to church, has had her prayer to the Christmas Basket Fund answered

Mrs E J. Cushing of 304 Central ave., Milton, moved by the plea of the little girl, has told the Basket Fund that she has a wheel chair she will give the Everett sufferer—and within a day or two the girl will be able to get around in the chair.

Meanwhile letters of distress are pouring in to the Basket Fund, and here is a sample—from a South Boston mother of five children, who expects a sixth soon, but who is not certain that she will return home from the hospital

"Could you please send me a Christmas basket?" the mother writes. "I am writing this early, as I expect to go to the hospital any day and by the time I come home from there I may be too weak to write—or probably I won't be home at all

PLAGUED BY WORRY

"I am the mother of five children and I expect my sixth soon. My husband is not working and what I get from the city is $9. I have my rent out of that and what is left I try to feed my little ones the best I can

"I had no one to give me a Thanksgiving basket I managed the best I could. I don't want to disappoint my poor children on Christmas

"I can't help writing this a little early but because I am in this state I worry if I'll have a Christmas like I had a Thanksgiving I hope God will spare me to come back to them, or if he don't I know you won't forget them."

This is listed as Case No. 11, and if you wish, you can help the mother and her family out personally, or you can aid in other ways.

You can make donations to this worthy fund—all kinds of donations. You can give cash or you can give clothing, or you can give foodstuffs. And you can also ask for the names and addresses of families whom you wish to serve yourself on Christmas Day We urge you to do what you can

CLUBS CAN HELP

The Christmas Basket Editor at 5 Winthrop sq., Boston, also wishes to urge reputable organizations clubs, church societies to investigate families in their districts and to submit the names addresses and the number of persons in need and eligible families where baskets should be sent

Do not wait until too late It is not too early now to begin the work and every good fellow in the land is needed, so get aboard and make his a happy Christmas for all those who have not fared so happily this year

And if you wish names of families, say how many, and the certified names will be forwarded to you.

You will be repaid in happiness, such happiness as you have never known, provided you have not done this before.

I am a girl 11 years old and please do not forget us this Christmas for a basket, for we are nine in the family and my father goes to the hospital because he is sick every week and I have a small brother who is sick in the hospital and the Doctor of the school said that my brother and I have Malnutrition I true, that is what is on my skin

My mother said it means it is under nourishment, because we do not have enough food. My little sister has a summer shirt on because she has no winter ones.

Last year I wrote and we did not get any basket I asked the man who was giving them out and he said my name was not there and the man felt bad because we were so many in the family and did not have our name, so he gave me a chicken to take to my mother and we were so glad, so please do not forget us this year. MAN SEES MARRIAGE AS A 'RACKET'

By HELEN ROWLAND

EVERY DAY [illegible]

• • •

That's the trouble with it. It is all being made SO easy for him, that he is already beginning to look upon it as a "racket."

• • •

[illegible]

• • •

He doesn't even have to court a girl or to go through the formality of proposing to her any more. He merely "pals around" with her and wakes up some morning to find himself "engaged."

• • •

• • •

And [illegible] there are [illegible] which he can dodge the terrors of the big church wedding and the agony of walking up the church aisle [illegible] wedding [illegible] to sound more like a [illegible] and less like [illegible] stock.

• • •

• • •

There is something about that "Till-death-us-do-part" ceremony, with the Lohengrin accompaniment, engraved invitations, white ribbon, rice and shoes and monogrammed silver that makes the thing seem sort of binding.

• • •

[illegible]

• • •

That's why the average girl loves a big, splurgy wedding. It is woman's One Big Moment—her golden opportunity to put herself across, electrify her friends, gratify her vanity and mortify her enemies, all in one grand gesture!

• • •

[illegible]

• • •

Perhaps it is easier to marry, as it is to die, when you are unconscious—just to pass on into Oblivion in a dream of romance, before the opiate wears off.

Hints From the Beauty Box

BECAUSE a woman has passed half century [illegible] she [illegible] and [illegible] dance along with the beauty pageant. If life teaches anything at all [illegible] that being an old soul [illegible] is stupid and foolish and that no woman is beloved if she goes tagging round wearing a face like a dill pickle, telling how much better the world used to be and declaring that younger generation is going to the dogs. 6-Hour Day for Work in Home

By ELSIE ROBINSON.

THAT SIX-HOUR working day—

It's going to be a Big Moment for Tom and Dick and Harry when at last it arrives.

Tom will climb down from his truck at the stroke of three—stretch those long legs of his, beat it to the nearest baseball game.

Dick will chuck his ledger into the drawer, take the straightest line home to easy chair and radio.

Harry will draw the dust cloth over the piles of bargain plus-sizes and striped sweaters, grab the phone, date up Susie, of the notions, to a movie.

Yes, it will certainly be glad tidings for the American Federation of Labor when the daily rap is cut down to six hours per. That's—[illegible] MALE A F O L—

BUT HOW ABOUT THE FEMALE OF THE SPECIES, PARTICULARLY THE HOUSEWORKING BRANCH OF FEMALES?

Has anyone heard any rumors about THEIR rap being reduced? No—anyone hasn't. And the following writer has obvious doubts that anyone will.

Have you or ARE you a houseworker? And will you be carrying on in the Home Line Trenches—or expecting some other woman to be carrying on—for a good ten hours after the males of the house have knocked off shift? If so, here's a letter that will fit you where you're addressed. It came to the editor of this paper.

Dear Mr. Editor:

I have been hearing about this six-hour day. It will surely be a great thing for the working men and I hope they get it. But how about the working women? I mean mostly the girls who go out to do housework.

The papers are always full of talk about how many hours men work. Did you ever stop to think how many hours women—cooks and second maids and nurses and general workers—have to work, Mr. Editor?

Generally they have to be on duty from fifteen to twenty hours a day. Where there is much entertaining or where little children have to be taken care of, house maids often work twenty hours a day, with no extra pay for extra work. Besides, they have no free lunch or supper hour like factory workers have.

Housework is the hardest work on a woman, in every way, and American houseworkers get very small pay for it. In some homes maids get as low as $5, $10 and $15 a month, while there are many who work for room and board. And besides this they have to endure any sort of treatment. There are many women who are kind to their maids and who give them consideration and comfort. But there are many who treat them like slaves and expect them to sleep in quarters that aren't really fit for a dog.

It seems to me a strange thing that this great, strong country should be trying so hard to help the lot of men and never give a [illegible] to the women workers.

WON'T IT LOOK FUNNY TO SEE BIG, STRONG MEN QUITTING WORK AFTER SIX HOURS AND GOING HOME TO BE WAITED ON BY WIVES AND MAIDS WHO MUST WORK TWENTY?

T. S., Los Angeles.

It will indeed, T. S. In fact, I suspect it will be one of those jokes that make history. For, knowing Us Gals as I do, I quail at the thought of what will happen to any male who tries Sitting Around Home under those conditions.

And yet it's plain that that six-hour day is coming for Dad and the boys. Then how about Ma and the girls?

WILL HOUSEWORK BE DONE IN SHIFTS?

Or will we presently be borrowing a leaf from our Communist neighbors and doing our housework in Community Kitchens, Community Laundries and Community Nurseries?

If not, why not—and what's YOUR plan? Send it in. If it makes news, we'll print it.

PHILIP AARON'S numb hands felt along the hull of something—maybe a life boat. He was too bruised and battered to care much, if he could only get a hold. It was the first time she had spoken. Thank God they were safe. Phil felt her sway toward him and caught her in his arms. At a [illegible] distance they sank down in the sand while the Atlantic fought it out with the New England coast. The clockwork beam from the light tower continued its stride across the churning waters.

The gale beat itself out by dawn. The first streak of day showed a long stretch of coast and a lighthouse about a mile to the right.

Phil got to his feet with difficulty.

"We've been properly introduced, don't you think?" he asked gravely. "Even Park would agree to that," he added.

"And if he didn't?"

He drew her arm through his and started up the beach.

"I'd have to explain that I didn't pull you out of the Atlantic for nothing," he said firmly.

She didn't answer, but their arms tightened, drawing them closer together. After all, when two people who love each other are churned up out of a ship wreck, there isn't much to be said that can't be managed without words.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm just a young girl with a fair amount of good looks but I can't dance or sing and although I'm very sociable I have no personality. I never get a chance to meet any boys because I never go anywhere for the reason that I can't dance. LILACS.

Dear Lilacs: I would suggest that you take an active interest in everything you possibly can that is going on in the school, if you are still in school. You will then come in contact with boys and girls and will soon lose your shyness. Why not ask some girl to teach you to dance?

Doesn't Care Any Longer

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been keeping company with a young man for two years. He is 25 and I am 21. I am still devotedly in love with him, but lately I have discovered that he does not care for me as he did once. B. B. B.

Dear B. B. B.: Perhaps you showed this young man too plainly how much you cared for him, and this caused him to lose interest in you.

FANNING

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Gamest Man We Knew. ↕ Broke Right Ankle.
Tad, the Cartoonist. And Then His Left.
S. Cleghorn Is Next. Came Back to Star.

Saga of a Man Who Wouldn't Be Beaten

The gamest man we ever knew was the late Thomas Aloysius Dorgan, the beloved genius of the cartoons, whose drawings of 20 years ago carry a present day kick no cartoonist yet has been able to match With the Grim Reaper's scythe hovering over him for years, confined to one room for many, many months, deprived of the comradeship of friends and the Broadway life he loved, the great Tad never lost his cheerfulness, his sense of humor, his bright and optimistic outlook and never allowed a hint of the tragedy he knew was hovering over him to creep into his drawings or writings He never stopped fighting. "Doc, you say this bum ticker of mine is likely to stop ticking any minute, any second," he would grin, regarding his affliction. "You don't know what you're talking about. It'll keep on ticking after the shamrocks are growing on most of your graves!" Strange to say it did—but only because Tad's never-say-die spirit kept driving it on. Remember, there were no bands playing, no flags flying in the battle Tad Dorgan fought. There were no cheer leaders, no cheer section booming support and encouragement, no great crowd furnishing incentive, inspiration. Tad played his game alone inside four gloomy walls. But no, four walls, but not gloomy walls, for in the lexicon of the dying Tad there was no such word as gloom.

Next to Tad about the gamest man we ever knew is Sprague Cleghorn, the hockey player. Hockey manager now, for after a quarter century on the ice Sprague's active playing days naturally are over. Sprague Cleghorn, who will send his Montreal Maroons into action against the Bruins in the Boston Garden tonight. Like Tad, Sprague Cleghorn fought a great battle; not against death, it is true, but against life cripplement, the premature closing of his career and the giving up of his job. Not once, but twice, the doctors and the experts told Sprague Cleghorn his playing days were over. But through his indomitable spirit the gallant athlete from the shady side of the border came back to confound the medical men and the hockey managers, players and writers.

Go back into the early days of Cleghorn's career. See him; playing school hockey in Montreal. Then on the Westmounts. Then on the amateur Wanderers and Irish Americans in New York in the halcyon days of the old Amateur Hockey League. See him turn professional and become a star on the old professional Wanderers of Montreal, alongside of Art Ross and other wizards of the ice. It is while Cleghorn was starring with the Montreal Wanderers our story begins.

The 1918 season is drawing to a close. The Wanderers and Toronto have thrown out opposing battlefronts. Cleghorn and Ken Randall both swoop like striking hawks down on a loose puck. Both are rough, tough, devil-may-care players. Neither will give the other fellow an inch. They came together in a crash that sent the both of them high in the air and to the ice with a sickening thud. Randall got up. Cleghorn tried, too, but sank back on the ice with ashen lips and a trickle of crimson coming from lips he had bitten to keep back the groan of pain. Red hot needles were piercing his leg. He had broken his right ankle!

A hockey player may break a leg, or an arm, a collarbone or a rib and come back as good as ever. An anatomical chart of Ching Johnson of the Rangers, for instance, would show all of those breaks and still others But a broken ankle is a different thing Ninety-nine times out of a hundred, a broken ankle means a broken and ended hockey career. Cleghorn's ankle was broken badly. "I don't think you are going to be permanently lamed, Mr Cleghorn," the doctors told him, "but you'll never be able to play hockey again." "As a hockey player, you're through, Peg," declared Art Ross and other teammates. "It's tough, Peg, but you must grin and bear it." The hockey writers echoed, "Cleghorn is through!"

Weary weeks with leg in a cast. Weary weeks of hobbling around on crutches Came the day when both cast and crutches were discarded and he walked again. More weeks of strengthening the limb and—wonder of wonders—Sprague Cleghorn donned skates and tried his leg out. The doctors agreed he could play again. He must wear a brace, but only as a precaution. First practice game. Cleghorn went through it with flying colors. But leaving the arena he slipped on the icy pavement, fell heavily and broke his left ankle!

That was the last straw. There had been precedents where a hockey player had broken one ankle and came back to play. But a hockey player with two broken ankles, both badly broken, too, coming back into ice action—not a chance! Doctors, players, experts, all agreed on that. The Wanderers hated to do it, but they gave Cleghorn his release. The club couldn't use cripples.

Another year rolls around. Another year of weary waiting and watching for Cleghorn. They freeze the ice in the Arena and there on steel blades once again is Cleghorn, trying himself out. No need equivocating. No need nursing those ankles. He must give them a good stiff trial right off and find out what the worst must be at once, not wait for it to come. They held up. Cleghorn himself felt he was as good as ever. But none of the managers wanted to take a chance with a player with two broken ankles—no manager except Tommy Gorman.

Gorman had played against Cleghorn many a time. He admired Sprague as a hockey player and a man. Tommy then was managing the Ottawa Senators. All Cleghorn asked was a chance. Gorman gave it to him. Tommy had nothing to lose, but everything to gain, no matter how slim were the chances of gaining that everything.

"Old Peg will not last a game," declared other hockey managers and players and writers. But Cleghorn not only lasted the game, but lasted the entire season, and, paired with Eddie Gerard, formed a superb defense for the famous "Perfect" team, the Ottawa Senators of 1920-21. The fellow with two broken ankles the whole hockey world said was "through" shone brilliantly throughout the season and was the scintillating star in the Stanley Cup series.

And that's why we say Sprague Cleghorn, now manager of the Montreal Maroons, is, next to the beloved Tad of revered memory, the gamest man we ever knew.

HERE'S AN OLD PAL IN A NEW ROLE

Of course you recognize him, good old SPRAGUE CLEGHORN, who played defense on the Bruins for two years and starred on the Wanderers, Ottawa, Les Canadiens and other big league teams. The Montreal Maroons make their season's debut under the Cleghorn banner in the Boston Garden tonight and the gang all will be on hand to give Sprague a greeting and then hope his team chokes. Sprague is new as a big league manager, but fans all know his success with the Providence Reds

HARVARD SIX NEEDS GOALIE

Harvard's hockey contingent went through its second workout at the Garden today, with Coach Joe Stubbs searching for a [illegible] class goalie successor to ex-capt. Hardy [illegible]

JACK "RED" BEATTIE

RED WAS THE OUTSTANDING ROOKIE OF LAST SEASON

Jack "Red" Beattie is [illegible] responsible for the rather poor start of the Bruins this season This brilliant young center of the Rossmen broke a leg while playing baseball last summer He was due to report not later than November 15, but he hasn't shown yet. Without him, the team seems unable to click

A hockey war almost resulted before the Bruins acquired Red Two years ago, he and Joe Jerwa Bruins' new defense man burned up the Pacific Coast League and were purchased by the local club

Then the New York Rangers, in some manner or other gained a claim to the pair and instead of being big leaguers at the start of last season, the two were with the Springfield Indians in the Can-Am League

Finally a compromise was reached Beattie came to the Bruins and Jerwa went to the Rangers

"Red" proved a star from the start and was unanimous choice as the outstanding rookie of the 1930-31 campaign.

Kid Chocolate Is Held Without Bail

New York, Dec. 1 (AP) Eligio Sardinas Montalvo, known in the boxing ring as Kid Chocolate, was held without bail by United States Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter today pending extradition proceedings brought by Augusto Merchan, Cuban consul general.

Merchan is seeking to send the fighter to Cuba on a charge of abducting Rosario Mora, whose engagement to Kid Chocolate was announced July 7, 1930. Chocolate will be taken to the Federal building for a hearing on Thursday.

The fighter smiled as he entered the courtroom in the custody of deputy marshals who arrested him last night just after he had scored a knockout in the St. Nicholas Arena.

[illegible] and the team won nine straight games under his direction and reached the playoffs for the first time as a result.

That feat earned him a manager's berth in the Can-Am League and he was most successful for three seasons with New Haven and Providence before the Maroons took him on.

The Bruins and Maroons are very evenly matched judged by the record of [illegible] this season. The [illegible] have won three and [illegible] four, while the visitors have won two, lost four and tied one.

The Bruins haven't lost a game at home and haven't won one away. The Maroons scored both their victories on home ice. The Bruins have scored 16 goals and have been scored on the same number of times. The Maroons have scored 17 tallies and have permitted 19 markers.

RING CHAMP APPOINTED SENATOR

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Wextra! Cauliflower Alley has made the U. S. Senate. Today W. Warren Barbour, who many of you saw win the national amateur heavyweight championship of the little old U. S. A. here in the old Arena back in April, 1910, was appointed to succeed the late Dwight Morrow as U. S. Senator from New Jersey.

The son of the [illegible] manufacturer received many offers [illegible] being independently wealthy, stuck to [illegible] Now look where he is.

Barbour isn't the highest [illegible] boxer to [illegible] In England [illegible] heavyweight champion [illegible] became a member of Parliament. John Morrissey, among the few of American heavyweight champions, entered politics and after serving terms in the N. Y. legislature was elected a member of the National House of Representatives in Washington.

[illegible] Sandy, one of the great [illegible] was a member [illegible] later and [illegible] one of the best lightweights New York ever boasted [illegible] the N. Y. Assembly and Senate. Mr. Boston

By JACK CONWAY

Henri DeGlane has been moved [illegible] the hot seat by the American Wrestling Association.

How about meeting Jim Browning in a return bout?" is the substance of a cable which the Association has sent to DeGlane, who is sipping red wine in gay Paree.

DeGlane was supposed to [illegible] meeting with Browning at a session of [illegible] American Wrestling Association [illegible]

I don't blame DeGlane [illegible]

Browning doesn't intend to rust out while waiting for DeGlane to give him another match. He will take on Lee Wykoff of St. Louis in a finish match, best two falls out of three, at the Arena on Thursday night. Wykoff recently showed a splendid defense against Browning's [illegible] scissors. Jim, however, says [illegible] Wykoff's defense won't mean a thing over the finish route.

ALUMNI HUNT SCALPS OF COACHES

MAHANEY AND MEEHAN IN DANGER

By BILL GRIMES

At the conclusion of every football season it is customary for the alumni and undergraduate bodies of colleges and universities whose elevens did not measure up to expectations to demand the scalps of the coaches. [illegible]

[illegible]

Anderson was licked before the started. If the Irish had gone through undefeated as they did the last two years Rock had them the cry would have arisen that it was a Rockne team but now that they have been licked it is an Anderson eleven and it is Hunk's fault that they did not keep their record clean.

Among the other [illegible] who [illegible] are [illegible] Mahaney [illegible] Meehan [illegible] N. Y. U. [illegible]

B. U. Seemed Headed for Good Season

[illegible] before the season was a month old.

[illegible]

The downfall of Boston University [illegible] cause of the poor showing. Mahaney was in hot water from the start [illegible] the season.

Wittmer Had Great Chance With Tigers

[illegible] Wittmer [illegible]

Chick Meehan [illegible] expected to sever relations with New York University. The former Syracuse and Dean Academy star made a fortune for N. Y. U. since he was weaned from the Salt City to put the Gotham institution on the football map.

Since coming into the "big money," N. Y. U. has become independent and no longer looks with favor on Meehan's methods of gathering football players. Realizing his value as a coach, Meehan has refused to allow the authorities at N. Y. U. to dictate and for about a month now he has been very much out of step with the athletic committee.

Georgetown Had Poor Season, Losing Four

Early in the season [illegible] to the effect that Georgetown was represented by one of the strongest elevens in the East. After defeating Lebanon Valley and Western Maryland the Hilltoppers [illegible] to get better than a tie with Duquesne, losing to New York U., Michigan State, Boston College and Bucknell. Although they came back and beat West Virginia and Villanova the second guessers are after Tommy Mills.

Although Illinois did not win a Western Conference game dropping decisions to Purdue, Michigan, Northwestern, Wisconsin, Chicago and Ohio State, Bob Zuppke is safe from removal but S. S. Wassman, Ohio State and Ed Hayes, Indiana, are said to be on their way out of the Big Ten.

[illegible] Harvard and Princeton [illegible] Mal Stevens is enjoying the most comfortable post season he has experienced in years.

Annually there are rumors to the effect that Adam Walsh will succeed Stevens at Yale. Walsh is finishing up a P. G. course at New Haven and as soon as he receives his degree, which in the eyes of the Elis, will convert him from a Notre Dame to a Yale alumnus, he will take over the head coach berth.

Realizing conditions Stevens may outsmart the New Haven authorities and resign as head coach in which event he would get out from under in a blaze of glory and at the same time make himself eligible for recall in the future if Yale started to skid again.

SPORTS REEL

Introducing the new U. S. senator from New Jersey, the Hon. W. Warren Barbour. Back in 1910, right here in Boston, Barbour won the national amateur heavyweight boxing championship of the United States. Barbour was offered all kinds of money to turn professional, but, being independently wealthy, remained an amateur.

Never again? Sports fans are asking that regarding Albie Booth's chances of donning his basketball uniform and flashing for the Eli quintet. Albie has been sent by the Yale health department to Gaylord Farm Sanitarium, where tubercular patients are treated, for an indefinite period.

B. U. Ice Standouts Are Shifted by Mentor

Loss of veterans due to graduation has resulted in the shifting of two Boston University hockey players in order to give the Terriers a stronger ice combination.

Coach Wayland Vaughan has decided to take Danny Harrington out of the net and make a defense man out of him and he will shift Whitey Clem from center to a wing berth.

The shifting of Harrington comes as a surprise. He reported for the team last year as a sophomore and [illegible] out of the job. [illegible] to devote his time to study.

Harrington Gets Chance on Defense

This year it was expected that Harrington would be placed in the net immediately and kept there, but Coach Vaughan has discovered that Harrington played defense in high school and has decided to try him out at that position, for [illegible] Ronnie Weafer is the only veteran defense man on the squad. With Harrington out of the [illegible] competition the battle will be between two newcomers. The [illegible] men for the job are [illegible] Peterson [illegible] manager last year.

The shifting of Clem to a wing has been expected as the Norwood boy deserves a place in the first line.

Clem was center in the second line last year and he played a good game. Toward the end of the year he was the high scorer on the team and if it was not for the fact that Art Wilson varsity center was playing an exceptional game Clem would have supplanted him.

The two wings who played regularly last year have both been graduated and their places must be filled. The shifting of Clem to a wing will take care of one [illegible] and the other is open to the man who shows best form from now on.

The proceeds of this game will be given to the St. Vincent DePaul Society of the church.

FAST CHANGE ARTIST

The last time you saw PETE CHESNULEVICH, you saw him starring for Boston College in the Thanksgiving Day football game against Holy Cross in the Harvard Stadium. Now look at him! He's changed the moleskins for a basketball suit and will play with the Fitton A. C. tonight in the big game against Al Marsters Collegians in Music Hall, East Boston. The proceeds will go to the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American.

Anderson to Remain as Coach at Notre Dame

New York, Dec. 1.—"Heartley Anderson will remain as coach of Notre Dame's football team so long as I am identified with the athletic affairs of the college," Jesse C. Harper said today. Harper is boss of all athletics at the South Bend institution.

"The report that Anderson is to be removed and that I am to take charge of football in 1932 is the craziest report I have ever heard," added Harper. "I do not know how it originated or who originated it.

"But it is wholly unfair to Anderson and I want to reiterate that his work has been satisfactory and that he will pilot Notre Dame's gridiron squads so long as I have any connection whatsoever with the university."

Victorio Campolo Hangs Up Gloves

New York, Dec. 1 (INS).—Victorio Campolo, [illegible] American [illegible] exploded by Primo Carnera last week, declared today he was through with the ring.

Everett Boy 1932 Villanova Leader

Broomhead as toastmaster will call on Coach D. O. "Tuss" McLaughry, Capt. Paul Mackesey and a representative of the Brown Club to speak. Brown football captains since 89 have been invited and among those definitely coming are Jack Lindsay, captain in '90 and '91, often called Father of Brown Football; Frederick Schwinn, '05; H. P. "Fuzz" Andrews, '18; E. H. Nichols, '20, and W. H. Shipherd '[illegible].

Southern California Captain Is Ill

Los Angeles, Dec. 1 (INS).—Capt. Stanley Williamson of the University of Southern California today was ill in a hospital. He was recovering from effects of tetanus antitoxin administered following U. S. C.'s defeat of Notre Dame to prevent a hand from becoming infected.

Calland Recovering

Moscow, Ida., Dec. 1 (INS).—Leo Calland, University of Idaho football coach, was reported recovering from an operation for appendicitis.

Seibold Says '32 Season to Be Best

Easton, Pa., Dec. 1.—Discharged from the hospital after being operated on for appendicitis, Harry "Socks" Seibold, veteran Boston Braves hurler, said today he will enjoy his best season in the major leagues next summer. He believes he will be in the best physical condition since he joined the Braves.

He intends to remain at Northampton, Pa., and take a rest until he departs for the southern training camp.

"I decided to be operated upon a few weeks ago, so that I would have plenty of time to recuperate before next season," Seibold said today. "I will be in great shape next summer and will win a lot of ball games for the Braves."

Eddie Farrell Greets Strong Harvard Track Squad

Coach Eddie Farrell helloed more than 50 candidates for the track team at the first practice in the new gym.

Football men are among the veterans on whom the Crimson will depend for a successful season.

Penn Hallowell, Frank Murphy, Arthur Foote, George Barry and Joe Fox are the group of distance men. Capt. Gene "Red" Record will take care of the hurdles; Jack Crickard, the dash and broad jump; Ira Hardy and Murdock Finlayson, the 35-pound weight; George Kuehn, the high jump and shotput, and Oscar Sutermeister, the pole vault.

—SPECTATOR— Says:

The market enters the new month with at least one factor developing in its favor, that certain stocks are near prices that can be considered almost automatic rally points. The big thing to watch in the next few days, other than news, is whether the market receives support when the industrial averages reach October 5th lows.

Steel

Informed opinion is that present speculation regarding the U. S. Steel dividend is at least premature. Directors do not meet until the end of January. A lot can happen in the meantime and it is certain that the business outlook then will have a more important influence on the board's decision than earnings this year.

[illegible] possibilities of [illegible] automobile industry [illegible] is [illegible] estimates of higher steel operations in [illegible]

Union Carbide

Important buying in Union Carbide is said to be waiting for the decline in the stock to below the 30 level. Interests familiar with the company's affairs are optimistic on its long pull outlook. One reason is the diversification of its lines in the last few years. Another is development of new products, one of which, synthetic resins, is said to have a big future.

Tale of using steel in the construction of small dwellings has interesting implications to Air Reduction, which is the big factor in the welding field.

Bonds

Investigation of current bond prices suggests that the brunt of recent liquidation has been borne in the bond market rather than stocks. Many once highly esteemed obligations are selling at prices that point either to eventual receivership or mean that they are grand bargains. In not a few cases the latter is probably true. A smart rally in the bond market would help sentiment as much at this time as almost any single factor.

One helpful thing in the securities situation is that commodity prices have fallen back to levels where resistance to further declines should become more stubborn.

RAILS SHARES CLOSE MOSTLY WITH GAINS

New York, Dec. 1—In the closing minutes of trading today on the New York Stock Exchange a moderate flurry of new selling sufficed to cut down most of the earlier sharp gains in carrier shares. Most railroad stocks, however, managed to finish a shade higher than yesterday.

The final selling served to erase a good deal of the rally made by the industrials during the afternoon after a forenoon decline.

SALES AROUND 2,000,000.

Industrials closed generally lower with a number of leaders down 1 to 3 points net. Transactions totaled about 2,000,000 shares.

The railroad stocks were buoyed by a rumor that the National Board of Mediation of Railway wages in Canada would shortly hand down a recommendation favoring a 10 per cent cut on all Dominion lines. Officially, there was no confirmation obtainable during the market session, but the report persisted.

Canadian Pacific lost half of its earlier point gain in the closing minutes. While selling occurred in other rails, Atchison, New York Central, Union Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake & Ohio, Missouri Pacific, Great Northern and New Haven closed from fractions to around 2 points higher. Wabash A lost 7.

Industrial leaders closing off 1 to 3 points included U. S. Steel, Allied Chemical, American Can, Case, Dupont, Johns-Manville, Western Union and Paramount. The sharp break in sterling acted as a damper on speculative enthusiasm.

WAGE DECISION RUMOR.

Persistent report spread throughout the financial district that a decision would shortly be handed down by the Canadian Board of Mediation of Railway Wages. Confirmation was unobtainable, but, according to the rumor, the anticipated report is expected to recommend a reduction of 10 per cent.

Because of its proximity to the United States, any Canadian action on rail wages would attract attention as a possible harbinger of later action to be taken here.

The familiar picture of the rapid fall of the English pound sterling drew widespread attention in early trading, but reassuring reports later came from foreign money centers as well as from New York banks. While no one in authority would attempt to forecast probable action by the British Government with respect to the pound, the point was stressed that British bankers are not showing great concern.

An estimated reduction of 26,396 barrels daily was reported in the nation's production of oil. This contributed to somewhat better feeling toward oil securities. Metal reports showed slight change, but copper producers said there was a scarcity of offerings under the seven-cent level and the opinion was that the price of copper was gradually beginning to firm.

Curb Market Shows Rallying Tendency

New York, Dec. 1—Rallying tendency prevailed in late trading on the curb today after early unsettlement. The market as a whole was forced to finish the day at irregularly lower levels. American Gas & Electric and Electric Bond & Share rallied. Cities Service proved a sluggish performer throughout the day. Oils held within narrow trading limits, with Gulf, Standard of Indiana and Standard of Kentucky showing fractional changes generally off.

(Yuma, Arizona, Sentinel.)

One of Yuma's young women who hurried down to the San Carlos for a "cup of coffee" when Ruth would be here, has the spoon that Mrs. Judd ate her soft boiled eggs with. GALL STONES

Mrs. J. Beaupre, 11 Halomatt Rd., Roslindale, Mass., says: "For more than six years anything I ate caused so much pain that I feared to eat. The pain was in my stomach, side and back. My heart would flutter and I would be nauseated. My physician told me that an operation was necessary to relieve the pain. I did not want an operation. A friend spoke highly of Dr. Walsh and took me to his office. I am so pleased with the result of Dr. Walsh's treatment of my case that I gladly consent to the publication of my experience that others who suffer as I did may know where to go for help." Signed, (Mrs.) J. Beaupre.

New England Progress
Good Signs of Better Times

The Boston Chamber of Commerce reports that nineteen new industries established themselves in Greater Boston last month.

This well may be called good signs of better times.

New England as a whole has begun a revival of the industrial dominance she once enjoyed.

We no longer depend entirely upon boots and shoes and textiles.

Our industrial field has diversified itself. Even in Maine they are making stoppers for whiskey bottles and putting their lumber to a thousand and one varied uses.

In some of our smaller communities, formerly relying entirely upon agriculture, you will find profitable plants making radio bulbs, automobile parts, airplane equipment, anti-fog lamps and those special things which the march of scientific advancement require.

Our textiles seem to have begun a renaissance. Durable cotton fabrics still flow out of the mills in large volume, but the new garments for women again vie with silks and satins in fashion and an alert woolman recently sold 50,000 pounds for tennis-ball covering.

These new plants come to New England because of the availability of water-power, because of our capability of water-borne commerce but, more largely, because we still possess the most skilled artisans in this country.

We of New England ought to have as much confidence in ourselves as the industrialists who choose this to be the scene of their new factories and plants.

No doubt we have. But a little bragging would help in this modern world of ours.

The signs of the times are better.

Ely's Wise Appointment
Workers to Get a Better Deal

The people of Massachusetts can congratulate themselves on the appointment of Mr. Edwin S. Smith to be Commissioner of Labor and Industries.

Governor Ely has thus brought into the employ and service of the people an alert, intelligent man of wide experience and benevolent philosophy in the relations between capital and labor.

He is an industrial expert in the broad sense of that term, having devoted himself to the problem of employment since his graduation from Harvard sixteen years ago.

It is a good sign indeed that during these years he has been associated with such men as A. Lincoln Filene, Henry P. Kendall, Stanley King, Henry S. Dennison and others who have the reputation of being eminently fair and conscious of their responsibilities in their dealings with the men and women obliged to work for a living.

Our State Department of Labor and Industries has fallen into disrepute and ineffectiveness, strangely enough in a Commonwealth noted throughout the world for the liberality and progressiveness of its labor laws.

Mr. Smith, on his record, seems to possess the talents which can regenerate that important department in the public estimation. The workers in this State can well assume a fair deal from him. The employers, as a rule, possess the strength to protect their own best interests.

With Mr. Smith and Miss Meehan at the helm, we can expect to see the beneficent labor laws enforced without fear or favor and we can expect to see the relationships between capital and labor improved at a time when harmony is so essential to complete business recovery.

Our Firemen and Charity

Commissioner McLaughlin informs us that plans have been made for the annual charity ball of the Boston Fire Department, to be held in February at the Boston Garden.

The uniformed men will soon be at your door soliciting your purchase of tickets.

Receive them well, and generously.

You can never tell when they may come by your summons, in the role of rescuers and life-savers.

The receipts of their event go entirely into their relief fund, for the care of their ill and needy, who are principally the widows and children of brave men who have given their lives to save others.

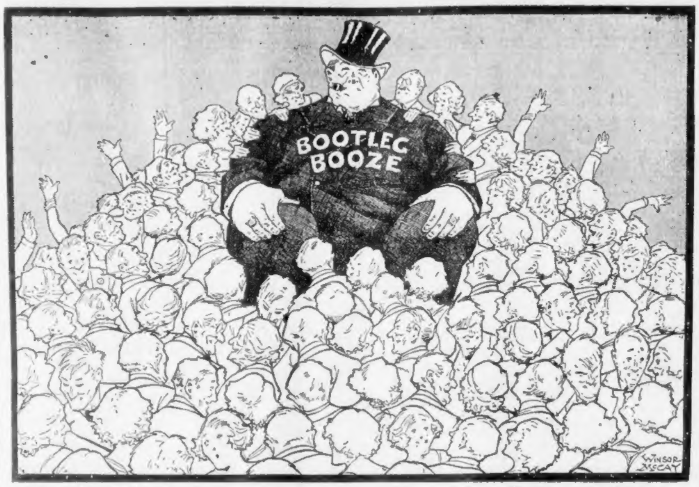
And we can be mindful of the fact that while caring for their own, they have contributed with fine generosity out of their own slim purses to the many other relief and unemployment funds in which they had no self-interest, only the broad interest of general humanity.

League Court Weakened

Prediction that the United States Senate will again reject the League Court membership in opposition to President Hoover comes from the Evening Post, of Charleston, S. C., which has favored such membership. The Charleston paper said:

> "The Court divided on the ruling eight to seven, so close a decision as to subtract all weight of finality from the decision. Moreover, it is the accepted opinion that the decision was made on political rather than on judicial considerations. . . .
>
> "The chances are that the World Court will once more fail of acceptance by the United States, and, it must be admitted, there is, in this latest exhibition of its working, something to give concern as to the usefulness of the institution."

America's Idol!



In a signed editorial appearing in the Boston Sunday Advertiser and other Hearst newspapers of November 29, William Randolph Hearst said, in part:

"You will only find here a broken and dispirited people, a supine people, tamely submitting to murder and plunder.

"You will find a Government which is an incompetent and extravagant failure, a nation discouraged and demoralized, a legal system burdened with imbecile laws which no one respects or obeys; a general epidemic of robbery and murder, and a general paralysis of business — EXCEPT THE BOOTLEG BUSINESS.

"WE STILL EXCEL IN THAT."

New York Day by Day -:- By O. O. McIntyre

Best-Dressed Man

NEW YORK, Dec. 1—The man most entitled to the distinction of "New York's best dressed man" is debatable. On Park avenue is a count from Vienna. On Broadway Mayor Walker would win hands down. Around The Playhouse Isaac Marcosson might receive a majority vote. At the Lambs, Earl Benham and Harry Silvey run close.

The truth is Hollywood has claimed some of the towns outstanding sartorial set-ups. At the moment, Gene Markey is leading the pack with two high hats and a one-stud evening shirt to spare. Adolphe Menjou has not stepped out of the picture yet either despite his horizontally striped shirts.

William Haines, Clark Gable, Jack Mulhall and Robert Montgomery are pace setters, too, among cinemaland's style arbiters. Nor does Gloria Swanson's ex-marquis look like something the cat dragged in when he flosses up for public appearances. Jack Buchanan is the best dressed visiting Englishman.

New York for several years has had no pronounced fop such as Ward McAllister and Harry Lehr. The individual who comes nearest to setting male fashions for all the world is, of course, the Prince of Wales. His closest rival is Jean Patou, the tall and athletic Paris dressmaker.

The best dressed artist in New York is probably Russell Patterson, and the palm among the bankers would go to Otto Kahn. Many consider Conde Nast as the fashion plate among the publishing fraternity and H. N. Swanson is out front as the Beau Brummel of magazine editors. And riding hard.

Among the dramatic critics, George Jean Nathan, whose wardrobe contains 75 overcoats, is distinguished for his raiment. His frequent companion to the theater when not escorting the lovely Lillian Gish, is Charles G. Shaw, a young writer and bon vivant, who swings a mean walking stick himself.

The theatrical producer who spends the most money on clothes is Ziegfeld. The dude of the night clubs is Pepy de Albrew, a dancer from the Argentine. Others who give a glitter to the fashion ensemble are Aubrey L. Eads, Sailing Baruch, Walter Wagner, Pierre Cartier, and Ben Ali Haggin.

Recently the fashion committee of the merchant tailor association decreed every well dressed gentleman should have in his wardrobe the following equipment: 1—Evening dress overcoat, silk or satin faced. 2—Single breasted or double breasted Chesterfield with velvet collar. 3—Full evening dress. 4—Braided morning coat with striped worsted trousers. 5—Director's suit with striped trousers. 6—High silk hat, opera hat, black homburg and derby.

Old Time show-boat ballyhoo that featured comedians presenting "songs and funny sayings" has been adopted by entrepreneurs of the jazz mosques. A cabaret announces an entertainment nightly "with a brand new budget of Comic Comments, Witty Sayings, Social Chatter and Sporty Songs."

Despite the enormous number of privately owned automobiles in the greater city, the hack license bureau declares New Yorkers spend one hundred and seventy-five million a year on cabs. The most consistent patron is an elderly financier who taxis from upper 5th avenue to Wall Street daily, keeping the cab waiting from 11 until 4 near his office. Timid taxicabists include J. P. McAvoy and Floyd Gibbons, who insist upon non-shatter glass and a 2-mile-an-hour pace

Men of big affairs have their sentimental moments, I presume. In the mail today came a hurried scribbl on the letter-head of a big industrial shot. It read: "This might be a plaintive idea for a struggling song writer—"Somewhere I Know There Must Be a You!" And it bore the initials of the same gentleman, a gentleman quoted on first pages the same day for his views about economics.

Every columnist has a few illustrious contributors who like to toss off a sonnet or lyric for print under an initialed anonymity now and then. If offers a brief escape from the monotony of money grubbing. And a number are surprisingly gifted.

By special delivery: "It is just a larkish little luncheon for happily married men. Name the type of lady to whom you would enjoy talking and she will be your table companion."

Oh, just one of the Follies girls of the '90's will do. Preferably with teeth.

'The State of the Union'
By Claude G. Bowers

THE NAVY LEAGUE has not always been entirely fair in its zeal for the maintenance of an adequate Navy; and the public awaited with an open mind the reply of the Administration to the serious charge recently made against it. When the President, with a judicial gesture, called upon the League for an apology which he has not received, and appointed a commission to investigate the League's charges, it was observed that the commission was a handpicked jury chosen arbitrarily by the accused. This left a bad impression.

The report was precisely what was to have been expected from the source. But the analysis of this report by the Navy League is utterly devastating. It shows misrepresentations due to slovenly methods, and a cunning juggling of facts and quotations from the League's indictment more suggestive of the manner of a lawyer with a bad case than of a judicial report. Even Administration organs have been shocked by the ease with which the Administration's house of cards has been knocked down.

The Administration has made no adequate defense, no satisfactory explanation, and the character of its reply to the charges makes more imperative than ever a thorough Congressional investigation into what the Administration is doing to the Navy. It is quite possible, as the New York Herald Tribune suggests, that Mr. Hoover does not "understand the full responsibility of a fleet." It may be, too, that the Administration's concentration on the relief of Europe does not leave sufficient time for consideration of America's vital needs.

Greater Demand for Charity

Thus far, through the utmost exertions, more money for the purposes of charity is being raised this year than last, but there is an infinitely greater demand for charity this year than last. Former Governor Smith of New York throws a vivid light upon conditions in this statement:

"The desperate need of the unemployed becomes more apparent as the block-to-block canvass continues. Our volunteer workers are discovering thousands of individuals who, instead of being able to give, are without means of support and have families dependent upon them for the necessities of life."

That great numbers of families in distress are concealing their condition because of pride all of us know from personal knowledge. That the amount of money being raised from individuals will not be sufficient to prevent suffering is now apparent.

Whatever amount finally is subscribed, but 30 per cent of this will represent the response to the abnormal problem of unemployment. And, there are 6,000,000 breadwinners out of work, and the number will be increased by the progress of the Winter. These, with their dependents, will easily represent 20,000,000 men, women and children.

When Mr. Hoover reports to Congress on the "state of the Union" it is to be expected that he will go into this phase thoroughly.

* * *

We Would Like to Know—

To get at the true "state of the Union" we would like to know:

Its figures on the number of families who have been evicted from their homes for non-payment of rent during the last year.

There can be no real report on "the state of the Union" which does not deal with the state of human beings, men, women and children, who make the Union.

We are all interested in profits and dividends, but just now humane statesmanship, worthy of a humane nation, must not gloss over the tragic fact that there are millions with whom profits and dividends are impossible and whose struggle is for mere existence.

* * *

A Ghastly Joke

We shall be interested in learning from the President's report on "the state of the Union" whether, during the last nine months the Administration has had the time or disposition seriously to consider these human problems; and if so what plans for the amelioration of these conditions and the prevention of their recurrence the Administration has to offer.

Of course, we all know that Mr. Hoover was speaking in the Pickwickian sense, when three years ago he held forth the hope of the elimination of poverty in his promise. That was a ghastly joke, and yet some poor souls believed it. But that is a thing of yesterday.

We shall want to know how many men actually have been put to work on public works appropriated for by the last Congress without any request from the President. And why there has been such interminable delay in getting the work started.

Any program he may submit for the amelioration of the suffering of the people who want to earn their bread in labor and cannot find a job; any plan he may submit to put great armies of these men to work; any suggestion he may offer on social legislation to give to those who work a reasonable sense of security against breadlines in the future—any program of humanity he may suggest will be given sober consideration and without thought of party advantage. For when human suffering comes in at the window politics should go out at the door.

But any report on "the state of the Union" that ignores these tragic human problems, or passes them ever with pious platitudes will be a mockery.

* * *

Hope It Will Be a Human Document

In his first inaugural address Woodrow Wilson, speaking for his day, anticipated even more the problem of our own when he said:

"Nor have we studied and perfected the means by which government may be put at the service of humanity. This is no sentimental duty. The firm basis of government is justice, not pity. These are matters of justice. There can be no equality of opportunity, the first essential of justice in the body politic, if men, women and children be not shielded in their lives in their very vitality, from the consequences of great industrial and social processes which they cannot alter, control or singly cope with. Society must see to it that it does not crush or weaken or damage its own constituent parts."

That thought should find its way into Mr. Hoover's message, though it would mean a new departure. Ten years of market-minded statesmanship have brought their penalty in panic and privation. The humanities in government have been brushed aside with the astoundnig dictum "that government has nothing to do with the individual." That expresses a philosophy that Signor Grandi might understand but it has no meaning in a democracy such as ours.

We are informed that Mr. Hoover's message will be an "economic document"; we hope it will be a human document as well.
